West End Woman Beats Thief and Recovers Loot

Mrs. Ida Ring of No. 147 Chambers street, West End, is not a volunteer policewoman. However—

Mrs. Ring, returning home, met a man coming down the stairs of her house. He was carrying a watch, a small coin bank and several articles of jewelry, all of which were the property of Mrs. Ring.

Mrs. Ring reached for the man, secured him with one hand, and took the stolen articles away from him. After she had administered a sound beating, she called for help and turned him over to the police.

All of which is why William O. Shelley, thirty-three, of Court street, pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering and larceny before Judge Creed. His case was continued.

SOUTH BOSTON HAS CLEAN COURT SLATE

South Boston took the record today for good behavior. For the first time in months there was not a single case to be disposed of in the South Boston District Court. Not only were there no prisoners brought in during the previous twenty-four hours, but there was not even a continued case. The slate was clean.

Wilson, Who Wed Gladys Nason, Gets Suspended Sentence for Auto Theft

Irwin F. Wilson, husband of the former Gladys Nason of Brookline, eloping choir girl whose secret marriage stirred the community a few months ago, today pleaded guilty to the larceny of an automobile in which the couple spent their honeymoon.

He was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction and the sentence was suspended until April 1. It was recommended that he would be held on complaint of the Newton police.

Wilson was arrested in Jacksonville, Fla., nine weeks ago, charged with stealing the automobile of Howard C. Eddy of Providence, R. I. His young bride was with him at the time. She showed amazement at the arrest, and stood by her husband at police headquarters, insisting on his innocence. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Nason of No. 15 Dacia avenue, Brookline.

The bride, the only a school girl of eighteen, was choir singer in her church, disappeared last May, causing a sensation for several days. Bright's home once by her father, she disappeared again, and her marriage to Wilson became known.

Caillaux Associate Gets Reprieve on Execution Day

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 19.—Important revelations made by Pierre Lenoir, who was sentenced to die today for treason to France, caused officials to postpone his execution at the last hour. Official announcement was made of the postponement of the execution, but officials were silent concerning Lenoir's revelations.

Lenoir was tried by a military tribunal on charges of transmitting intelligence to the enemies of France. He was associated with Caillaux, former French premier, who is now under arrest on charges similar to those of which Lenoir was convicted.

NOTED PRELATE LOST LIFE IN STORM

Death Toll in Gulf Hurricane Will Exceed 500; Many Are Suffering

By International News Service.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 19.—Revised figures today on the death list in the gulf hurricane made little change in previous lists. The toll will exceed 500. Army forces were beginning to get large supplies to the stricken towns today. At least $5,000,000 is needed, authorities say, to check the suffering.

The body of Bishop Paul J. Nussbaum, a distinguished Catholic prelate of Corpus Christi, has been identified.

Governor Coolidge received the following telegram today from Mayor Gordon Boone of Corpus Christi, Texas: "Deeply grateful your gracious telegram just received. Property damage may exceed twenty million dollars and loss of life total five hundred. More than 4,000 thousand people homeless and in destitute circumstances. Our chief need now financial assistance to rehabilitate our people, city and surrounding country. Request contributions be made direct to our relief committee, Clark Pease, chairman finance committee."

3 BIG STEEL CONCERNS YIELD

Independent Companies Sign Wage Agreements; Union Men Refuse to Delay Strike

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 19.—Three large independent steel concerns have already signed wage agreements with the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers and others are negotiating with the union, according to a statement given out this afternoon by William Z. Foster, secretary of the national committee, which has the steel strike in charge.

Other developments of the day included:

Closing down the hot mill of the McKeesport tin plate company, throwing 1,300 men out of work. Unsettled conditions given as reason. Lockout of one thousand men by the Pittsburgh Steel Company at Monessen, Pa. Men say they quit.

Nearly 4,000 men loafing at Martins Ferry, O., where steel laborers are striking for increased pay.

Statements by many steel officials in the Pittsburgh district that they expect to operate their plants Monday.

In an interview this afternoon Secretary Foster said:

"It was simply impossible for the committee to postpone the strike and do justice to the cause of the workmen."

"NO OTHER WAY."

"The labor conference called by President Wilson does not meet in Washington until October 6," said Mr. Foster. "It may be a week or a month. At best, we could not have a final decision within five or six weeks. If this decision did not meet with the approval of the steel work-

OIL WORKERS' UNION PREPARING TO STRIKE

Washington, Sept. 19.—Oil workers in California, Texas and Oklahoma are preparing to strike, American Federation of Labor officials announced today.

The Oil Workers' International Union, one of the youngest bodies affiliated with the federation, has approximately 10,000 members. The men demand higher wages, shorter hours and better conditions in the camps.

The policemen's union of Schenectady, N. Y., has been granted a charter, making a total of thirty-nine police unions now affiliated with the A. F. of L.

MISS EDMUNDS, TEACHER, DIES OF HEART FAILURE

Miss Anna Edmunds, 67 years old, of No. 61 Quincy street, Roxbury, for many years a teacher in the John A. Andrew School at South Boston, died suddenly today of heart failure. Miss Edmunds was walking along Quincy street and was about to take a car when she was taken ill. She was removed to a nearby drug store, but expired before a physician arrived.

Ashcart Horses Win Over Millionaire Pair at Newport

Newport, R. I., Sept. 19.—As its poor working girl is often the best looking, so the hard working ashcart horses may outclass those that are petted and sleep in padded stalls. That is what happened at the Newport County Fair horse show in class 26.

John Dannin's ashcart horses, John and Stump, defeated Millionaire Henry A. C. Taylor's Ernest and Mary from Glen Farm. The Dannin horses drew a dusty old ashcart, while the high strung Taylor pair were hitched to a handsomely painted cart.

BROOKLINE FIRE UNION TO GIVE UP CHARTER

Will Cancel Affiliation With American Federation of Labor Members Say

Members of the Brookline Fire Department will shortly surrender their charter to the American Federation of Labor. It was stated today.

The men, who are affiliated with the International Fire Fighters' Union, stated that because of pressure brought to bear on them, they will undoubtedly decide to leave the union. They declared no meeting had been held as yet, but that sentiment was strong in favor of surrendering the charter.

A variety of reasons are said to enter into this decision, although the men maintain that under their constitution they are prevented from striking. It was stated that a meeting would be called before long at which the matter would be taken up.

CITY TO BE UNDER GUARD FOR WEEKS

The sentencing to jail of a volunteer policeman for looting, and the conclusion of the trial of twenty-seven Metropolitan Park policemen, with reservation of the commissioners' decision until tomorrow, featured the local police situation today.

It was also stated by local labor leaders that the advertisements of Police Commissioner Curtis calling for candidates for the new police force violate the constitution. It was said that the demand for ex-service men discriminated against other citizens.

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley also stated today that there are at present 641 regular members of the police department on duty, of which 406 are patrolmen. He added that of this number there were twenty-five captains, forty-five lieutenants, thirty-five inspectors and 130 sergeants. He said that the number of patrolmen had been increased by the return of men on sick leave and vacations, who were not members of the union.

The superintendent said that the State Guard will remain on duty in Boston for several weeks, at a cost of between $10,000 and $15,000 a day.

CHARGE POLICE ADVERTISEMENTS VIOLATE LAW

In a statement issued today by Organizer McCarthy of the A. F. of L. and President O'Connell of Boston C. L. U. Commissioner Curtis was accused of violating the law in advertisements by failing to state that labor trouble exists. The statement also called attention to the fact that there are 400 ex-service men in the policemen's union, and declared that other service men would not take their places on the Boston police force.

STATE GUARD TO REMAIN ON DUTY IN BOSTON FOR SEVERAL WEEKS

Will Protect the City Until New Police Force Can Be Formed, Crowley Asserts

The case against the twenty-seven patrolmen, members of the Metropolitan police, came to a sudden end today after an agreement had been reached between the police, through their counsel and members of the commission, to hear only two of the witnesses who will speak for the twenty-seven patrolmen. The witnesses are William T. Murphy, a member of the police since 1910, and Francis J. Greeley, connected with the force since May 21, 1915.

A blanket statement, covering the defence of all the defendants, was read by Attorney Apsey, counsel for the police, as follows:

"On Tuesday night, September 9, we were ordered to do duty in Boston on two occasions, and went to South Boston and Scollay square to quell riots, without objection. The hours were 8:10 at South Boston and 11:30 at Court street. We were commended by the superintendent.

"On Wednesday, September 10, at 3:45 p. m. about, we reported for duty at the station at the dam. The superintendent and Lieutenant Chapman were present. The superintendent said to us, in substance, that he supposed we knew the day men had laid down and he asked us if we would to stick or if we wanted to lay down.

"The roll was called and we answered 'No,' feeling that the superintendent was clearly giving us the option to continue doing duty in Boston or go back to our reservation if we wanted. Superintendent West at the day before, told us that we would not be asked to do duty in Boston."

The men on trial are: William Brunton, Albert C. Diamond, Robert A. Edmonds, Frank M. Fitzwilliam, John A. Gannon, Francis J. Greeley, Arthur E. Holt, Harry C. Jackson, Thomas J. Kelleher, Cornelius P. Larkin, Joseph F. MacDonald, Jon D. MacKinnon, Patrick J. McDermott, Stephen A. McGrail, Hubert A. McMasters, John A. Moore, Peter J. Sullivan, William C. Murphy, Bernard O'Brien, James F. O'Toole, Frank Pool, Charles J. Riley, Edward F. Roche, Jr., Maynard W. Rogers, John Shea, Earl K. Sims and Michael Waters.

In his summing up, Senator Apsey said that the men misconstrued the order to be a call for volunteers, and that they wanted to go back to their reservations. Asked how this could be when Superintendent West asked a positive question as to whether the men would assist in preserving order, Mr. Apsey repeated his original statement.

Patrolman Francis J. Greeley, one of the two patrolmen allowed to speak for the twenty-seven, agreed with Patrolman Murphy that the men would have gone out if ordered. He said that there was no direct order, but when asked if they were going to do duty the men thought volunteers were wanted. The witness said that the men never had been admonished to remember their oaths and that he had never heard of Rule 13 until he entered the hearing room.

NEW FORCE IS SOUGHT.

A State-wide campaign to build up a new Boston police force largely composed of husky young veterans of the world war, was begun today.

Advertisements appeared in every newspaper in the State, calling for candidates who when appointed will receive $200 a year more to start, together with a new uniform greatly superior to that which the old members were forced to buy.

Examinations will be given September 22 to 27, inclusive, and a preliminary board, composed of former superintendent William H. Pierce, Captain Charles T. Reardon and Captain Percy Skillings will receive applicants at Kingsley Hall, Ford Building Ashburton Place.

The advertisements of Police Commissioner Curtis, calling for candidates for the Police Department make no reference to a strike, which is called for under the law when such a condition exists. The commissioner has maintained the original position to the effect that the patrolmen are not on strike but have vacated their places by deserting.

USE CAP FOR HELMET.

The advertisements call for residents of the Commonwealth, not less than five feet eight inches tall, and not less than 140 pounds in weight. They must be not less than twenty-five nor more than thirty-three, and must have served in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, and been honorably discharged or released.

After undergoing a general and physical examination by the commissioner at Kingsley Hall, the applicants will then be given a non-competitive Civil Service examination.

The new police force will be uniformed in a far better way than the old one, one of the features being the substitution of a cap for the antiquated helmet. Members of the old force were for years desirous of wearing caps, similar to those of the fire department. The new caps will probably be white duck in Summer and heavy blue in Winter, both visored. The men will be given coats of military cut, for Winter wear, while reefers of varying weights will be worn in other seasons.

A crusade has been started against the unauthorized purchasing of firearms in Boston stores. Special policemen have been stationed outside these stores and examine each person who comes out with a weapon. Unless the purchaser has a permit, he is taken to headquarters.

PLAN STRIKE FINANCES.

Although even its own members do not know yet the result of the secret balloting, the committee of seventeen of the Boston Central Labor Union meets tonight to make plans for the eventuality of a general strike.

The financing of such a strike will be arranged at tonight's meeting of the committee, and plans will be made to exempt from participation in the strike certain unions whose members are considered necessary for the health and safety of the city.

The program drawn up by the committee will be laid before the Central Labor Union on Sunday.

West End Post of Legion Favors Reinstatement of Police Officers

At their regular meeting the James E. Welch Post, American Legion of the West End, went on record as favoring the immediate reinstatement of the policemen now on strike, also advocating an immediate arbitration of the existing differences. One hour was allowed for general discussion before calling for a vote on the motion. The vote was 148-2.

The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, the James E. Welch Post, No. 58, American Legion, is for the maintenance of law and order at all times and;

Whereas, the James E. Welch Post believes that conditions in Boston would warrant the reinstatement of the members of the Boston Police Department, therefore be it;

Resolved, that the Police Commissioner of Boston reinstate said policemen pending arbitration between parties involved.

Commander A. Gray presided.

Aldermen of Medford Vote Increased Pay to Police and Firemen

At a meeting of the committee on salaries of the Medford Aldermen, an increase of $200 a year was recommended for the police and fire departments.

This includes all grade officers. This brings the minimum for the police for the first year to $1,600 and the second year to $1,700 and every year thereafter. The salary of the police chief will be $2,300.

The salaries of the privates in the fire department will be $1,600 and $1,700, respectively, for first and second year men. The deputy fire chief's salary increase of $200 was recommended, as he did not receive a wage increase one year ago, when others were favored in that respect.

New York Police Join With Firemen in Unions of 80,000 City Employes

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 19.—A move to form one "big union" of municipal employes in this city, including the policemen and firemen, and later affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, is in full swing today, following a closed meeting of the thirty representatives of fifteen organizations of city workers here last night.

Burt L. Schneider, who was described as the president of the Union of Technical Men, and who presided, issued a statement on behalf of the thirty representatives, calling attention to the reluctance of New York city officials "to adjust wage scales, although other unionized workers have received wage increases amounting to 100 per cent."

News of the move to form a union of municipal employes came as a surprise, for the plans had been kept secret. The men present at the initial meeting claimed to represent 80,000 persons on the city payroll and said a drive would be undertaken at once to enlist those workers who are not now members of any organized body.

Four Women Fly to Washington in Lawson 'Liner'

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The Lawson "air liner," with fourteen passengers, arrived at Bolling Field, Anacostia, at 12:57 o'clock this afternoon. The liner, which is a trans-continental flight, left Minneola, L. I., at 8:38 a. m. today.

Those on the "air liner" were Alfred W. Lawson, designer and owner; Charles Cox, pilot; Vincent Burnsnill, engineer; Miss Felicity Burnsnill, Andrew M. Surig and Carl Schory, mechanics; Frederick A. Steele, Ryan J. David, Tracy H. Lewis and Miss Catherine Healy, all newspaper correspondents; Mrs. Steele, Frank Shober, Richard Wightman, vice-president of the Aeronautical Touring Association, and Mrs. Wightman.

GIRL ATTACKED IN CEMETERY AT SAUGUS

Escort Arrested and Charged With Crime on Her Statements

While returning home from a visit to her grandfather, Daniel Willis, she was led into the cemetery in a lonely part of the town and attacked by her escort, who had been visiting with her, according to the story told the police. With her clothing practically torn from her body, the girl staggered to her home and made known her condition to her family, who called a doctor and the police.

According to her story to the police, a young man whom she had known for some time was returning home with her late in the evening, following a visit to her grandfather. While passing the cemetery her escort suggested they go in for a few minutes' rest. She promptly refused, whereupon he shoved her through the gate and placed a gag between her teeth, then threw her to the ground and proceeded to tear the clothing from her body.

Early today Frank Wellman, 24 years, was arrested at his home on Milton street, Lynn, by Patrolmen Hines and Tansey of Saugus, and taken to the police station, where he was charged with the attack. Wellman, who is an instructor in the merchant marine service, is of athletic build, well over six feet in height.

Miss Willis is a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in Saugus. Slight of figure and extremely pretty, she is a favorite at the Saugus High School.

It was stated today by her physician that her condition was so critical she would be unable to appear in court to testify against Wellman.

DIETRICK DECLINES TO MAKE WAY FOR GASTON

Ex-Congressman Frederick S. Dietrick, in an open letter to Francis J. Finneran, president of the Massachusetts Democratic Club, has rejected the suggestion that he and other candidates for the governorship withdraw in favor of William A. Gaston. Mr. Dietrick cites the various planks in his platform which, he says, Mr. Gaston would not favor. These planks include State employment for the blind and crippled and extra compensation for all men who served in the war.

TIRED OF LIVING, ENDS LIFE BY TAKING GAS

Leaving a note that she was "tired of living, ill and despondent," Mrs. Emma M. Putnam, sixty-six of No. 19 Auburn street, Waltham, committed suicide in the kitchen of her home by inhaling gas. She was found dead by her husband, William Putnam, proprietor of a restaurant, when he returned from work. Mr. Putnam said that she had been in ill health for sometime.

Lowell Man Upholds Adams' Traditions In Politics

A political campaign in Massachusetts without an Adams mixed up in it is apparently impossible.

The present year is no exception, the family honors being borne by Smith J. Adams of Lowell, descendant of the John Adams who wrote the American Constitution, and a candidate for the office of county commissioner of Middlesex.

The affinity between the House of Adams and constitutions continues, for in the recent Constitutional Convention the Lowell man was a leader among progressives.

Included in his platform are planks favoring discrimination in favor of American citizens in letting county contracts, turning Middlesex North Training School into an agricultural college, and consolidation of county jails.

FRANK TINNEY HOST FOR GUARDSMEN

Frank Tinney, star of "Some Time" the musical comedy now at the Shubert Theatre, who was a captain in the United States forces during the war, will be host to 1,700 of the Massachusetts State Guardsmen and their officers, now doing police duty in Boston, Sunday night.

Realizing that the guardsmen, working long hours, housed in emergency quarters, and without entertainment, are having a strenuous time, Captain Tinney conceived the idea of asking 1,700 of them to be his guests at the Shubert Sunday night. The entire "Some Time" company will take part in the entertainment, including the big beauty chorus which created such a furor in New York.

Manager E. D. Smith and the entire house force of the Shubert are co-operating with Captain Tinney and the "Some Time" company to give the militiamen the time of their lives.

SERVICE NOTES

Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman, commanding the North Atlantic Coast Artillery District, is on a five-day leave of absence to attend the marriage of his son, Captain John H. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

• • •

Sergeant H. S. Eberly of Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., has been assigned to the office of the attending surgeon at army headquarters.

All officers as well as enlisted men suffering from nervous diseases, will be sent now to Cape May, N. J., according to arrangements made by Major W. W. King of the 304th Tenth Cavalry regulars.

Colonel George L. Brown, retired, who has seen fifty years in service of the army, and even after his retirement in 1906 was military instructor in various institutions, was asked today in Boston what he thought of the police strike. He said: "I've seen a great deal in my long military life and have been taught something. I should advise every man on the police force who went out to resign from the union and seek his job back. When you have made a mistake, it is chivalrous to acknowledge it."

• • •

Hospital Sergeant Frank A. Hannah, who has been in the medical service of the army since 1913, and was senior sergeant in charge of the regimental aid station of the 26th Infantry, First Division, and afterwards in the office of the attending surgeon at army headquarters, will be furloughed to the regular army reserve, September 27. He was passed at Bedan, where he did splendid service for which he was highly recommended. He is a well known chemist and takes a professional position in Philadelphia.

BOSTON POLICE FORCE WAS BIGGEST

Before the Strike It Led All Other Cities for Number of Men Per Capita

Until the patrolmen went on strike Boston had the largest police force in the country per capita population.

Psychologists, in analyzing the rioting that occurred in the twenty-four hours when the city was left practically with no protection, may lay the cause on this fact, for many of them claim that people surrounded by the most restraint are the first to engage in reckless law violation once the restraint is removed.

BIG CITIES COMPARED.

A table in the current issue of the Reference Library Notes shows that prior to September 9, there was one policeman here for every 422 citizens. No other city has such a high percentage.

Staid old Philadelphia is the closest with one for every 454 residents. New York city finds it necessary to have one for only every 578 of her inhabitants. Chicago, which has acquired considerable notoriety in the past from crime, assigns one patrolman to every 585 persons. That also is the ratio in Washington and Buffalo.

Boston had more policemen to the square mile than any of the sixteen leading cities, with the exception of New York and Philadelphia. New York has 33 policemen to every square mile while Philadelphia has 32. Boston had 27. St. Louis is fourth with 24. New Orleans has but one to the square mile.

BOSTON DIVISIONS SMALL.

The size of the nineteen police divisions in this city are small compared with those of other places. They average 3.3 square miles each. This promotes more thorough policing, as each division has its staff of officers and special service men to ferret out crime in that section of the city.

Philadelphia and Buffalo are the only cities where the average district is smaller than Boston's. In each of these places they are 2 square miles. New York's police districts are 3.7 square miles, while out in Los Angeles there is only one district to every 41.7 miles, almost as much as the entire area of Boston.

New Orleans has the smallest police force of the sixteen cities with one to every 1,536 citizens. Toledo is second in this respect with a policeman to every 1,192 persons.

AN INTERESTING TABLE.

The table in which these details are compiled is as follows:

City	Policemen Per Capita.	Policemen Av. Dist. to Sq. Mi.	Sq. Miles

JOHNSON CALMLY TELLS OF HATRED THAT LED HIM TO SLAY SPROUL

CONFESSES TO SAVE OTHERS

Feared Innocent Persons Would Be Involved in Orono Murder Case

Bangor, Me., Sept. 19. — Richard Johnson, elderly mill hand, took the stand in his own defence in Superior Court here today and related calmly the slow growth of the hatred which finally drove him to kill James A. Sproul of Orono in cold blood.

While a crowded courtroom listened enthralled to the epic of vengeance, the mill hand said that he had for four years lived in anticipation of one day killing Sproul, who was his former foreman.

He declared that he had gone to Portland to adjust his worldly affairs before starting for Orono to slay the foreman, that he had realized what the penalty would be, and would do it again.

While Attorney Daniel W. Nason has based Johnson's defence on legal insanity, the man himself showed no inclination to escape complete punishment. He said that he had not meant to confess originally, as he did not consider the slaying of Sproul a crime, but finally was forced to surrender to save innocent people from suspicion.

THOUGHT OF SUICIDE.

He at one time after the shooting had an idea of suicide, he said, as his main purpose in life had been achieved in the murder of the foreman. But he changed his mind.

Dr. Carl J. Hedin, superintendent of the Bangor State Hospital, who has had Johnson under surveillance since arraignment in lower court, has already filed a report stating that Johnson is mentally unbalanced.

Chief of Police Anson A. Powers, testifying as to Johnson's confession said:

"Johnson stated to me, 'I have put up with so much from that man (Sproul) that I would do it over again if I got a chance.'

SURRENDERED TO CHIEF.

"On the morning of August 2," continued the police chief, "Johnson came to me after a night's lodging in jail, where he had sought shelter. He said, 'Powers, can I see you alone.' We then went into the chief's office, where Johnson said, 'I have got something to tell you, but don't know how to go about it.' After a slight hesitation, he declared calmly, 'I am the man who shot Sproul.'"

Johnson then went on the stand and told the following story in substance: "I was born in Portland and have been working in mills for a long time. About thirty-one years ago I cut my throat in an attempt to commit suicide. I was despondent. I came to Orono in 1903 and worked at the pulp mill for fourteen years, being absent but one day in that time. Sproul, the foreman, abused me while I was at work.

"Once, when I was scalded with steam from an overflowing tank, Sproul said: 'It would be a damn good thing if they scalded the life out of you.' That was in 1910. It went on that way for some time. I told him: 'If you continue this business something will happen.' His reply was: 'Damn you, I can take care of myself.'

GAVE LAST WARNING.

"I said, 'This is the last tip I will give you.' I got so excited I couldn't do my work satisfactory, and would have to stand for three or four minutes to see what valve to turn. I bought the revolver three years before this affair, and, when I left, I took the revolver to Portland. When I came back I brought the revolver.

"The night of the shooting I was watching for him, and when he came along I said: 'That you Sproul?' and he said: 'Yes.' I said: 'We'll settle that affair between us' and fired.

"After I shot him he went in back of the Scott house. I thought he would be in the house and they would pick him up and I would have a law suit on my hands. I went up the road and threw the revolver into the river and the cartridges on the railroad bank. Then I took the train to Bangor. I went down on the wharf to commit suicide, but something made me change my mind.

"I went up from the wharf and stubbed my toe and hurt it badly. I had thrown my hat into the river. I met a watchman and told him I lost my hat. I went to my room later and went to bed. In the morning I got up at 7 o'clock and read the account of the murder of Sproul.

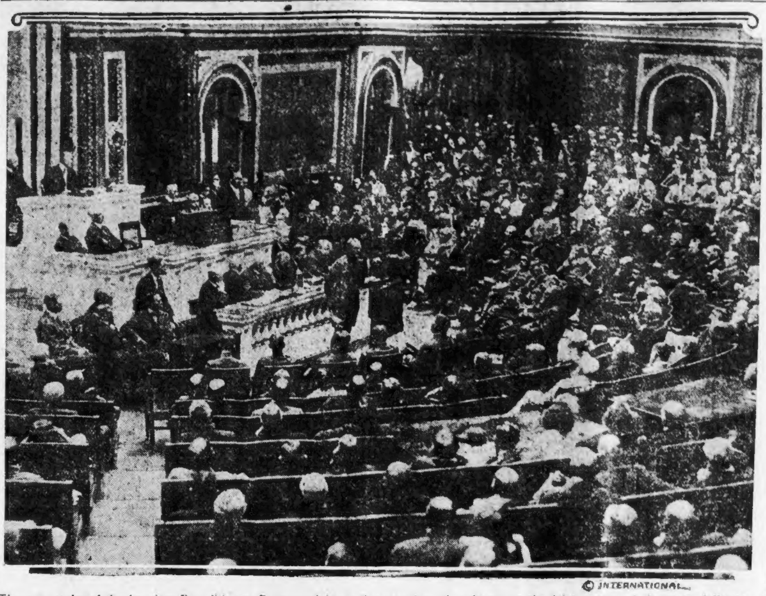

FELT GREAT RELIEF.

"After I went to the police station I felt like a man who had put a heavy bag of grain off his shoulders. I straightened up to see if I had got rid of my load.

"I knew it was against the law when I shot Sproul and knew I would be arrested if I was found out. I knew I would be shut up somewhere but didn't know whether in jail or prison. I knew that punishment for murder is imprisonment for life.

"The newspaper men, the sheriff and constables were hunting up people to blame the murder on and there was a young couple up there that they were bothering the life out of. A man told me one night that detectives were hunting up some old letters and I knew old letters were not connected with it and they were going to get hold of someone to punish that was not guilty at all. That is why I gave myself up to Mr. Powers."

PERSHING ADDRESSING JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS

© INTERNATIONAL

The commander of the American Expeditionary Forces replying to the speeches of welcome at the joint session of Congress, following a tremendous ovation.

BARKENTINE IS BLOWN UP AND BURNED

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 19.—Captain Angelo Francisco and nineteen men of the Italian barkentine City of Biloxi arrived last night, reporting their ship blown up and burned to the water's edge twenty-two miles off Mobile Bar at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. They were picked up by the American steamship Knight Island and brought to Pensacola.

Captain Francisco reports an explosion in the engine room of his ship, followed by flames, which forced the crew to abandon the ship hurriedly in small boats. Four members of the crew, including the captain's brother, are missing.

The City of Biloxi was lumber laden, bound from Gulfport to Genoa, on her first trip.

New York, Sept. 19.—Owners of the Munson line today gave up hope for the safety of the freighter Munisia, which is nine days overdue at Havana. She carried a crew of forty-seven men. The Munisia sailed from Mobile on September 10 and no word has been received of her since. She was listed as missing in the terrific gulf storm.

"Mother" Hicks, Good Angel of Guardsmen, Loves "Her Boys"

"They're all the same to me, the general and the little boy guardsman. All the same, except with one difference—the little guardsman needs the extra care."

This is the way Mrs. Annie Hicks, "Mother Hicks" as all her "boys" at Police Headquarters call her, sums up her opinion of her proteges. Now, it is no small job, these days, being police matron and adoptive mother to a general, and a major, and sundry lieutenants, not to mention orderlies and aides, and scores of little boy privates, which last sleep on army cots 'o nights, and shoulder great, big, businesslike guns, nearly as large as themselves, 'o days. But such a task doesn't worry "Mother Hicks."

"Just simply housekeeping," she explains. "'Your family' is what Commisisoner O'Meara used to call the men under my care here. So now I just say to myself, 'my family' has increased 10 or a dozen or more. That's all."

EASY TO TAKE CARE OF.

Mrs. Hicks has learned the philosophy of the soldier, from looking after him. "They're so young, these little guardsmen," says she. "Just boys. That's why it's easy to take care of them. Look at their cots. Army cots—no box springs, nor hair mattresses, nor anything of that sort. Well, those boys are working harder than they ever worked in their lives before, and sleeping harder. Work them like this at home, and they'd say a word or two. But at soldiering—well, they come back here at night, and dump down on their army cots, and sleep like dead men, with never a word of complaint.

"'How's everything?' I ask in the morning.

"'Just fine,' say they. For there's one thing a real live boy wants before anything else. That's a chance to live rough. To live rough, to sleep hard when it's soldiering—that's the right of any free-born male.

"And, bless you, that's why it's so easy to take care of them, the youngsters."

AND SHE KNOWS BOYS.

Now Mrs. Hicks, because she is a devoted mother and a more than devoted grandmother of a yonug sailor who gave his life in the great war, knows boys—as one youngster found out. "He had peach-bloom cheeks and a baby face, and he stood extra straight," she explains, "and never complained of being tired, though he had done duty in the riot days and his gun was as big as himself. I was down to the guards' dormitory, sort of fixing things up, when he came in. He looked so pathetically boyish that I had to speak.

"'Sonny,' said I, 'how old are you?'

"'Eighteen,' said he.

"I gasped. I couldn't help it. 'You blessed baby,' said I, 'you're not a day over sixteen.'

"He caught for his breath. 'How do you know that?' asked he, 'how do you know?'

"In that instance it seemed not tactful to embarass a gentleman further on the extremely delicate subject of his years.

"For they're just having their turn now. Many of them were too young to go to war. They have never got over being sorry for that. And now they feel they are doing their bit, though at home."

WISDOM OF A VETERAN.

Mrs. Hicks says this last with solemn feeling. For, widow of a Grand Army veteran, and grandmother of a 20-year-old officer who was lost when the Tampa was sunk, she cherishes in her heart one love before all others. And that is for youngsters in uniforms.

"They're the best boys you could meet," she concludes. "The general is a real man; the officers couldn't be nicer to work for, but when you meet the plain little private, your First Corps Cadets boy, living rough for the first time in his life, you have met the strength and the courage and the hope of the city. For it was these teachable youngsters, guided by the experience of older heads, who made it safe for their sisters and their grandmothers, like myself, to come and go in the great city. So that's why I like the extra work they bring, God bless 'em. And that's why I don't mind how much muss they make or how long they stay. For they bring their sunshine with them. And they're welcome to what Commissioner Curtis said they should have here at headquarters—the very best we can give them."

BILL DISMISSED IN WALDOR STRIKE CASE

The bill in equity brought by the Waldorf System, Inc., of Salem, against Harry Crudas and the officers and members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, Union No. 294, was today dismissed by Judge Pierce of the Supreme Court after a statement by Frederick W. Mansfield, counsel for the union, that the strike had been called off at his suggestion. The Waldorf system maintains an "open shop," and claimed that the respondents after the strike was on interfered with its business and attempted to intimidate employes and customers.

MOTORMAN IS BLAMED FOR FATAL CRASH

Non-Observance of Orders Caused Death of Fellow Employe in Holden

Blame for the trolley collision in Holden, September 3, which resulted in the death of Motorman Herrick Hurlburt and injury to twenty-five passengers, was placed upon the motorman of the north-bound car, who is not named, in a report to the Public Service Commission today by Inspector John H. Parant.

Inspector Parant declares that failure to obey instructions caused the accident.

"If any one of the rules and orders governing the movement of cars and operation of the road had been followed, the accident would have been prevented," says the inspector in his report.

The accident occurred on the Holden line of the Worcester Consolidated system and the cars crashed when each was traveling 20 miles an hour.

Inspector Parant declares that though the block signal system was out of order as the result of a storm it was the duty of each car crew to obtain orders from the car despatcher in Worcester at certain turnouts.

The order called for the crew of the northbound car to wait at a turnout for the south-bound car to pass. Instead of doing so, however, the motorman proceeded over the turnout without having any instructions to do so and the crash occurred.

Hurlburt was driving the south-bound car. Both of his legs were cut off and he died in a few minutes.

"SOMETHING HAPPENED," SAYS FITCHBURG MAN

John Collins appeared in the Central Court before Judge Creed today charged with assault on William Quigg of Fitchburg. Quigg appeared in court with his head bandaged. He testified that he was walking along Merrimack street when "something happened." Asked by Judge Creed as to what happened, Quigg said: "I don't know. When I woke up in the hospital my head had five stitches in it."

It is alleged that Collins struck or pushed Quigg, who fell, striking his head on the curbstone. Collins was held in $500 until tomorrow.

The trucks will move about the city selling bacon, groceries and canned goods at from 12 to 27 per cent cheaper than the retail merchants.

'Cookless Cook' Is Divorced by Her Luckless Swain

"She's a good cook, but she won't do any cooking."

Thus did Charles H. Brown of Stoneham sum up his domestic difficulties to Judge Fox today, in Divorce Court at East Cambridge. But Charles had other troubles. Once his wife, Sarah, the cookless cook, tipped a pan of boiling water over him, he said, because he refused to hand her a roll of bills.

She often threatened him, he declared, and once said she would break his neck. They were married in 1907, and Sarah cooked for him, as a good wife should, for three years. Then a day came when Charles asked her for some corn bread, and she retorted, "If you want it, make it yourself."

From that time on his life was one of storm and stress, he said. Sarah did not contest the divorce and it was granted.

BULGARS ADMIT BETRAYAL OF ALLIES IN 1913

Amends Promised When Text of Treaty Is Delivered to Them at Paris

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Bulgarian envoys received the text of the peace treaty today at the Quai d'Orsay (French foreign office). The ceremony was brief and formal. This leaves only the Turkish treaty to be presented.

Only thirty official spectators and ten newspaper correspondents were present at the Quai d'Orsay. The thirty represented the governments of the various allied and associated powers.

Frank L. Polk, Under Secretary of State, and Henry White represented the United States. The ceremonies were very short, beginning at 10 [illegible] and ending within twenty minutes. Twenty-five days were given to the Bulgarians to reply.

BULGARS ADMIT WRONG.

M. Theodoroff, head of the Bulgarian peace delegation, replying to Premier Clemenceau's address, said that the policy of former King Ferdinand of Bulgaria was an act of violence against the will of the Bulgarian people. He admitted that Bulgaria had betrayed the allies in 1913, but asserted that "Bulgaria has now thrown off the shackles and is ready to make amends."

Theodoroff appealed to the allied and associated powers not to reduce the Bulgars to a state of servitude. "Right and justice conquered in the war," said the Bulgar statesman. "Bulgaria was forced into the conflict by the compulsion of illegitimate authority. Excesses have been committed, but we promise to punish the authors of them without mercy."

SOME ISSUES LEFT OPEN.

While the military clauses are calculated to reduce the Bulgars to a harmless state, several minor changes were made at the last minute in the preparation provisions to appease the Greeks and Rumanians.

It is generally admitted that the most important decisions involving rival claims for Balkan territory are left for a later date and perhaps may not be treated by the peace conference at all, but by the League of Nations. The fact is that but for the American attitude toward Thrace, which has finally resulted in that question being definitely upheld, the Bulgars might have gotten the treaty several weeks ago.

Wilson, in Glass Cage, to Throw His Voice a Mile

By International News Service.

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 19.—Standing in a plate glass cage and speaking into an electrical apparatus that will throw his voice so that it may be heard for a mile, President Wilson, who arrived here this afternoon, will probably have the largest audience of his country-wide tour when he makes his address at the Great City Stadium at Balboa Park.

The cage is made of plate glass and it is a little larger than a telephone booth. The front side will remain open and those who have experimented with the apparatus say that the faintest whisper can be carried to all parts of the huge stadium.

GARY REBUFFED WILSON'S EFFORTS TO AVERT BIG STEEL STRIKE

REFUSED TO MEET UNIONS

ty-four international unions, left the city.

At the last session a formal vote to defer the strike was considered. This was defeated. Then a motion, reaffirming the decision to strike on September 22 was unanimously adopted.

President Wilson was told in the letter that "after a thorough, calm and deliberate review and study of the entire situation, more than 2,000,000 organized men ordered the strike and set September 22 as the date thereof."

The whole blame for the strike was placed on the head of Judge Gary, chairman of the steel corporation, who refused to receive the leaders in conference.

"Win or lose, the strike is inevitable and will remain until industrial despotism will recede from the untenable position now occupied by Mr. Gary," the President was told.

"The American Federation of Labor must bow to our edicts. We are the supreme body." This was the answer of John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the conference of leaders of the steel workers, when asked if there was any possibility of the strike being averted through intervention of the A. F. of L.

"The men are going to strike," he added. "I can see nothing that will stop them."

Judge Gary's attitude of refusing to recognize the union was denounced by several speakers, one calling it "war on democracy."

UNION GAINING STRENGTH.

It would be impossible to give any accurate estimate of the number of workmen who will quit work next Monday, it was said at strike headquarters today. Applications for membership in the union were said to be coming in by the hundreds daily.

"There is a mistaken impression abroad," said Secretary W. Z. Foster today, "that this strike is against only the plants of the United Steel Corporation. Every non-unionized steel works in the country will be affected."

A strike platform, containing twelve planks or demands, was one of the principal topics of discussion at the meeting. This pronunciamento is in the hands of a special committee.

Just before adjournment the conference adopted a resolution giving to the organizing committee full power to conduct the strike.

The only statement given out was the answer of Chairman Fitzpatrick to the statement of Judge E. H. Gary. The statement was signed by John Fitzpatrick, William Hannon, William Z. Foster and D. J. Davis.

It refutes Mr. Gary's contentions and says he is getting away from the issue altogether, that the "open shop" is not being considered but the issue is a conference with the leading steel men of the country. It concludes:

"There is one and only one question at issue and that is the question of a conference. The employes have exhausted every avenue of approach to the corporation for the purpose of securing a conference, and every avenue has been closed to them.

"John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the National Steel Workers' committee, conferred today with Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, after which he met President Gompers. He characterized as 'ridiculous' rumors that the workers would not receive financial support during the strike. The international unions of affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are in back of the strike to the last ditch," he asserted. Neither he nor Mr. Morrison would discuss their conference.

M. F. Ryan, president of the Railway Carmen's Union, arrived in Washington this afternoon to confer with officials with a view to determining to what extent the organization will be involved in the strike. All members directly employed by the steel companies will go out, it was stated, the only question to doubt being how many of the others, indirectly involved, will quit work.

It was believed that carmen will refuse to handle steel shipments or do any work in any way connected with the business of the steel companies. Andrew Furuseth, head of the Seamen's Union, was another labor leader who arrived this afternoon to confer with the Federation officials.

Judge Gary Refused to Heed Wilson's Plea for Meeting With Men

Washington, Sept. 18.—President Wilson did everything in his power to prevail upon Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, to meet a committee of the steel workers, and thus prevent the strike of the industry called for Monday, it was learned here today.

It was reported on excellent authority that the President went so far as to send Bernard M. Baruch, former head of the War Industries Board, as his personal emissary to the steel magnate, but that the latter remained firm to his refusal to treat with the men as a union.

The international unions involved in the strike have decided not to pay the regular strike benefits during the proposed walkout, it was announced today by William H. Johnstone, president of the International Machinists' Union. Instead, a system will be devised whereby all of the members of the various unions will receive financial aid instead of only those who have been members for at least three months.

"It is our understanding," said Johnstone, "that the international organizations will endeavor to give financial relief to all of the men involved in lieu of regular strike benefits. This will be done in order that all of those participating will receive the same consideration.

"Under the laws of the international organizations, only those who are members for three months in good standing would receive regular strike pay, and the national committee deemed it advisable to overcome this condition by handing all moneys to a central committee, so that all men, regardless of their length of membership, might receive aid."

Heads of Big Steel Plants Issue Appeal to Workers to Remain

By International News Service.

Youngstown, O., Sept. 19.—Presidents of three big independent steel companies, employing 27,000 workers, today appealed to their employes to remain loyal and continue work on and after September 22. The appeals were issued in pamphlet form, printed in nine languages. In each case it is stated that the policy of the "open shop" will be continued.

The statements were prepared by President James A. Campbell of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company; President W. A. Thomas of the Brier Hill Steel Company, and President Thomas J. Bray of the Republic Iron & Steel Company. Both the Brier Hill Steel and Sheet and Tube companies point out that under the open shop policy an employe may or may not, as he chooses, belong to a labor organization, but it is not necessary for an employe to join any such organization to retain his job.

INTEND TO OPERATE.

President Campbell states that "the employes' representation plan now in effect throughout the works provides communication and means of contact between the management and the men of matters pertaining to industrial relations. The company will continue to deal with the employes under the provisions of this plan. It is the intention to operate the plant Monday, September 22, and thereafter, the same as usual."

President Bray states that under the company's open shop policy the practice will be continued "of the company to meet its employes either individually or by committees to discuss any matters affecting working conditions, wages, etc."

President Thomas states that "in justice to all of our employes, we have followed the policy of an 'open shop' in the past and this policy will be continued. As employes of this company, you have always enjoyed a square deal, and this company will continue to deal with its employes as fairly as it has done in the past. It is the desire of this company to operate the plants Monday, September 22, the same as usual, and we would therefore call upon every employe to evidence his loyalty by reporting for work and conscientiously and energetically doing his duty so as to continue operations and thus preserve the property."

DEPUTIES TO BE SWORN IN.

Special deputies have been sworn in by Sheriff Ben Morris to assist in preservation of order. The Sheet and Tube Company operates plants at East Youngstown, Youngstown, Hubbard and Struthers, Ohio. The Brier Hill has plants in this city, Niles and Warren. The Republic Iron and Steel has its principal works here and plants in Indiana, Illinois and Birmingham, Alabama.

Plans have been developed by the unions to picket the plants next Monday. Union leaders claim the companies have the mills thoroughly garrisoned. Foreign language papers today advised their readers to refrain from any violence.

ALLEGED SLAYER HELD IN SOMERVILLE COURT

Gaetano di Domenico, 23, of Gore street, Cambridge, was arraigned in Somerville District Court today, charged with the murder of Guiseppe Ugitto of No. 14 Porter street, Cambridge, on Septem-er 9, pleaded not guilty, and was held without bail for hearing Wednesday. The police allege that di Domenico shot Ugitto dead following a card game in a house just over the Cambridge line, in Somerville. Two patrolmen were attracted to the house by the shots. Di Domenico ran, and exchanged shots with his pursuers, being wounded three times in the leg. He has since been at Somerville Hospital.

Suggests Heligoland As Place to Try Ex-Kaiser

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 19.—Heligoland, the rocky islet in the North Sea, which was once known as "Germany's Gibraltar," has been suggested as the scene of the trial of the ex-Kaiser, according to the Daily Mirror today.

While the attorney-general of England has completed his case for the prosecution of the one-time war lord, the question of venue has not been settled, the Daily Mirror states.

Among the places suggested for trial, in addition to London and Heligoland, are Scapa Flow, where the German fleet was interned, Dover and Margate.

MERCHANDISE UP TO A STANDARD

The Weather Vane of Trade

Interest in the personal lives of mill workers has done much to raise enthusiasm and improve textile production. This far-reaching influence is behind the output of the beautiful goods upon the counters.

The return of the Lyons mills in France to the production of great fabrics of a good quality will have its effect on the trade in a comparatively short time.

There has been a reason for high prices in footwear—shoes are vitally important to the correct apparel of women. Greater demand and less production, combined with shipments abroad, are conditions that are likely to continue. To buy now is wisdom.

Woolens are high priced, but with a reason. Readjustments from government to civilian orders, instability of dyes, shipments abroad, a shortage of wool, a clouded condition in labor organizations all tended to create unprecedented prices; but the compensation is—more wonderful fabrics than we have ever had.

Sure Way to Regain Robust Bloom of Youth

A smooth, velvety-soft skin, with a delicate peach-like bloom, is one of the Creator's most exquisite works. When the first blush of youth is over, this beautiful tint and satiny lustre are rarely seen. How to preserve them—that's the question. Famous beauty experts abroad long have known that ordinary mercolized wax works wonders in this direction. It actually gives a new surface to the skin, restoring the youthful girlish color and softness in a remarkable manner. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggstore, will convert a faded, wrinkled, freckled or pimply complexion into one of captivating loveliness in less than two weeks.

No special skill is necessary in applying mercolized wax, it being smeared on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.—Advertisement.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

'BALFOUR VISIT' MYSTERY ALL DUE TO ERROR

Wife of Cousin of the Foreign Secretary a Guest at Manchester

Not all "tips" are stories, any more than "all is gold that glitters." Thus mediated a representative of the American returning from a hurried trip to the North Shore.

Thursday a report was current in Boston that the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour, foreign secretary of Great Britain and director of her finances, had arrived in the United States incognito and was staying at the villa of Philip Dexter at Manchester. Visions of a world sensation were in the reporter's mind as he caught the first train to Manchester. Was the statesman here to arrange internationalization of war debts with America's financiers. He is known to be interested in such a plan. Or perhaps he had come to combat the campaign being waged by American friends of Irish freedom. The incognito seemed quite reasonable for secrecy is one of the Hon. Mr. Balfour's requirements while traveling. When head of the British mission that visited the United States shortly before this country entered the war, his movements were more thoroughly camouflaged than those of any of the distinguished visitors who came in those days.

ROW STORY STARTED.

After careful investigation at Manchester, it developed how the story started.

Mrs. Edward Balfour of London, wife of a cousin of the foreign secretary, recently arrived in this country for a brief visit with relatives and friends in the fashionable North Shore colony. She is of American birth although this is her first visit here in thirty years. At the New York customs house she was vouched for by Mr. Dexter so that she her luggage would not have to undergo minute examination. Mrs. Balfour's name is Isabella W., and she sometimes signs her name as "I. W. Balfour." It is presumed that some one looking over custom reports upon seeing "I. W. Balfour of London," mistook the initials for "A. J." and noticed that that person had come to the Dexter home at Manchester.

PLANS EARLY RETURN.

Mrs. Balfour at present is at the Summer home of Mrs. Thornton K. Lothrop, wealthy North Shore colonist who in the Winter time lives on lower Commonwealth avenue, this city, and is a generous supporter of charitable and artistic enterprises. Mrs. Balfour plans to return to England in about two weeks.

Edward Balfour, her husband, is on his estate in Scotland. The last heard from the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour he was in Paris in connection with the peace settlement.

Fined for Carrying Knife

Frank Stacey, twenty-eight, married, residing on Lamson street, East Boston, was arraigned in East Boston court today before Judge Brown charged with carrying a dangerous weapon, in the form of a dirk knife. He was found guilty and fined $100. The fine was suspended for six months. Stacey was arrested by Sergeant James E. Lewis, who found him with a belt, holster and the knife.

Rohlfs Makes New Altitude Record, 34,610 Feet

By Universal Service.

Roosevelt Field, L. I., Sept. 19.—The world's altitude record was broken again by Roland Rohlfs, test pilot for the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Company, this time officially, when he climbed to a height of 34,610 feet in a Curtiss triplane with a 400-horsepower motor.

The official sealed barograph, placed in the machine by August Post, secretary of the Aero Club of America, was opened and read by the officials of the Aero Club. The reading showed that Rohlfs had bettered his unofficial flight of 34,409 feet last Saturday.

An official altitude record of 30,400 feet was made by Rohlfs on July 30. Rohlfs said that conditions were absolutely perfect, and that it was not so cold as when he made his unofficial flight.

The new figure will stand at 34,500 feet, since Roosevelt Field is 110 feet above the sea level.

REPORT ITALIAN ADMIRAL WAS SEIZED

D'Annunzio, Supreme at Fiume, Says He Is Inspired From on High

London, Sept. 19.—Admiral Casanova of the Italian Navy, who arrived at Fiume to take back the ships which had joined Gabriele D'Annunzio's forces of occupation, has been delayed by D'Annunzio, said a Paris dispatch to the Daily Express today.

A great crowd gathered on the docks and watched while the warships' guns on the waterfront were turned against the ships. The Admiral was taken to the palace and led before D'Annunzio.

"All goes well," declared D'Annunzio in a statement to the Gazetta Popolo. "For a week I have suffered from fever, but I received a call from a superior hidden force, and though the fever burns, I was consoled because war has made me a mystic. I feel inspired from on high in this mission."

DE VALERA ASSAILS "BRITISH LIES" ABOUT IRELAND'S RESOURCES

DESCRIBES DESTRUCTION OF ERIN'S IRON INDUSTRY

THE RESOURCES OF IRELAND.

By EAMON DE VALERA,
President of the Irish Republic.

If you look at the map of the world again you will notice that Ireland lies directly in the course of the Gulf Stream. This ocean current bearing the warm waters from the tropics encircles the island, making the climate delightfully equable and mild—much milder than the climate even of the neighboring island of Britain.

Eamon De Valera.

The fertility of Ireland's soil is unsurpassed. The rich color of the verdure is, perhaps, the first feature that strikes the eye of the traveler, and hence the name of the "Emerald Isle."

Poets of every land have sung of its charms: "A climate soft as a mother's smile, a soil fruitful as God's love."

But it is not poets who have written the following:

1. "Some places exhibit the richest loam I ever saw turned up by a plough."
2. "Superior to England as a soil."
3. "It is the richest soil I ever saw."
4. "The luxuriance of the pastures, and the heavy crops of oats that are everywhere raised, even with the most wretched cultivation, attest its extraordinary fertility."
5. "In the elements of natural fertility only the richer parts of England and very exceptional parts of Scotland approach to it."

—Not poets, but statistical surveyors and other experts—Wakefield, De Lavergne, Arthur Young, McCulloch in the Statistical Account of Ireland—in the Statistics of the British Empire, etc., etc.

In the early state papers of Henry s VIII we read:

"If this lande were put once in order as aforesayd, it would be none other but a paradise, delicious of all pleasaunce, to respect and regard of any other land in this worlde."

And in the writings of Bacon:

"For this island, it is endowed with so many dowries of nature, considering the fruitfulness of the soil, the ports, the rivers, the bottoms, the quarries, the woods, and other materials and especially the race and generation of men—valiant, hard and active, as it is not easy, as not upon the Continent, to find such concurrence of condities, if the hand of man did not joint with the hand of Nature."

And coming down to half a century ago, Lord Dufferin wrote in the London Times:

"Some human agency or other must be accountable for the perennial desolation of a lovely and fertile island, watered by the fairest streams, caressed by a clement atmosphere, held in the embrace of a sea whose influence fills the richest harbors of the world, and inhabited by a race valiant, tender, generous, gifted beyond measure with the power of physical endurance, and graced with the liveliest intelligence."

As Mr. Fox, in a little handbook unfortunately out of print and rare even in Ireland, from which I have taken these quotations, points out, the Marquis of Salisbury, English Tory Prime Minister though he was, made clear that the "human agency" was the government of England. These were his words in the English House of Commons:

"What is the reason that a people with so bountiful a soil, with such enormous resources as the Irish, lag behind the English in the race? Some say that it is to be found in the character of the Celtic race—but I look to France, and I see a Celtic race there going forward in the path of prosperity with most rapid strides—I believe at the present moment more rapidly than England herself.

"Some say it is to be found in the Roman Catholic religion; but I look to Belgium, and there I see a people second to none in Europe except the English for industry, singularly prosperous, considering the small space of country that they occupy, having improved to the utmost the natural resources of that country, but distinguished among all the peoples of Europe for the earnestness and intensity of their Roman Catholic belief. Then I cannot say that the cause of the Irish distress is to be found in the Roman Catholic religion.

"An honorable friend near me says that it arises from the Irish people listening to demagogues. I have as much dislike to demagogues as he has, but when I look to the Northern States of America I see there people who listen to demagogues, but who undoubtedly have not been wanting in material prosperity.

"It cannot be demagogues, Romanism, or the Celtic race. What, then, is it? I am afraid that the one thing which has been peculiar to Ireland has been the government of England."

DECLARES NAVY LEAGUE LIES.

It is a common mistake to imagine that the material resources of Ireland are confined to the abundant riches of its soil. It is the notion the British government tries earnestly to propagate. It is false. England's government, and England's Navy League, is interested in getting the world to believe that.

"Ireland, being without coal and iron, mines, oil, ships, wood or chemicals, must, therefore, always be German or British."

The English Navy League lies. Ireland is not without coal. There are several and vast coal fields in Ireland—one in Leinster, two in Munster, three in Ulster, and one in Connaught, but the English government has prevented their development chiefly by denying transit facilities. The Irish railways are designed for English strategical purposes, military and naval, and for the most part took no account of, or it would be more correct probably to say, purposely avoided the coal regions no less than the natural lines of internal domestic trade.

The most conservative estimate is that the total Irish coal deposit amounts to 200 million tons. The majority of estimates range far beyond this. Some geologists maintain that the amount is probably 2,000 million tons. It has been proved that in one of the seven coal districts alone the coal reserve is greater than that with which the whole island has been credited by the English government. The English government is interested in making it appear that Ireland could not be an industrial nation, being equipped by nature only for agriculture.

PLENTY OF COAL IN IRELAND.

Coal? Coal there is in plenty in Ireland; and yet this Winter the poor of Dublin are threatened with a coal famine, being dependent on the English collieries that charge monopoly prices!

In the north there are extensive fields of bituminous in the south even more extensive fields of anthracite. Of one of the bituminous deposits of the north, that in Tyrone, an expert (Mr. Griffin), who made special investigations, stated that

"From 22 to 32 feet of solid workable coal was found within a depth of 120 fathoms. Amongst the numberless pits of the English coal fields there is no example of the same thickness of coal within the same distance from the top."

Yet the total output of Irish coal was only 84,000 tons a few years ago—not quite $250,000 worth, with only 700 men employed.

Why? Because England wants to preserve for her coal lords the profitable Irish market. The yearly consumption is about four million tons. Some $15,000,000 yearly is the bill for coal and coke. They would lose it if the Irish coal mines were worked.

A few short figures of railway to give the necessary transit facilities are all that are required, for one ten miles long, another four miles, and so on, but these cannot be built because the permission of the English Lords and England's Commons must first be obtained, and the English coal interests are too strongly represented in these bodies for that permission to be given.

TRUE GOLD MINES OF IRELAND.

But even if it were true that Ireland had not a ton of coal—she possesses what no other European country possesses to the same extent—vast regions of bog with their wealth of peat—the "true gold mines of Ireland," as Sir R. Sankey, president of the Board of Works, calls them.

The Irish lowland bogs average no less than 15 to 25 feet in depth, and the Bog of Allen alone is not far from 100,000 acres in extent. Kerr's estimate is that there are 7,000,000,000 tons of dry peat in the bogs of Ireland, whilst Sir R. Sankey puts the calorific value of the Irish peat at 5,104 million tons of coal.

With the modern method of drying and compressing, this vast store of energy would be available now for Irish domestic and industrial purposes, but England does not want it to be availed of. England doesn't want Ireland to develop industrially. England doesn't want to lose a constant and remunerative market.

It would need a special article to indicate what Ireland loses from the neglect of her peat deposits. The Irish climate is particularly favorable for the scientific preparation of the peat—so little frost, whilst the rain does not matter. Authorities state that only in four years of the past eighty would weather conditions have prevented the manufacturing processes from being continuous all the year round. On the European continent the Summer months only are available.

BOGS WELL DISTRIBUTED.

The bogs are well distributed throughout the country and the waterways lie adjacent and are eminently suitable for transit. For instance, the Shannon, the Barrow and the two main canals would seem as if they were specially designed for this purpose.

Peat could be sold in Ireland for half the cost of imported coal. Unlike coal, it is clean, loses little from wastage, improves by keeping, is free from sulphur. It is superior to coal for smelting purposes, is eminently suitable for the production of electricity and gas, the manufacture of paper, peat moss litter, oil, with a score of other industries, without mentioning the several by-products.

As for iron, why, at one period the iron smelting industries were far more extensive in Ireland than in any other country, as the late Dr. Emmet points out in his great work, "Ireland Under English Rule." Sir William Petty found, in 1672, that there were 8,500 furnaces in full blast, giving employment to 22,500 men and women, whilst 2,000 more at least were employed directly in the manufacturing.

Kane writes:

"Ireland was sprinkled over with small iron works in which wood charcoal was employed, and thus iron was manufactured of excellent quality. In fact, such as we now import from Sweden and Russia have all the finer purposes of cutlery and mechanism."

Quoting Boate:

"The Earl of Cork, whose iron works being seated in Munster, afforded him a very good opportunity of sending his iron out of the land, and did in this particular surpass all others. He had profited about 100,000 pounds clear gain by his said iron works."

Kane adds:

"We thus see that 250 years ago iron was an article of export from Ireland to London. In 1745 the last charcoal furnace was extinguished in Kerry, when they had burned out the last remaining wood. There is no doubt that the ores of Leinster and Connacht's coal fields are equal, and in average, even superior to those generally employed in Britain. . . . taking all the circumstances into account iron can be made as cheaply and well in Ireland as in any other part of the empire."

IRON ORE STILL ABUNDANT.

Iron ore is abundant still, and of the best quality. Irish iron could sell formerly at three and one-half pounds sterling per ton as against inferior English pig iron at ten pounds per ton—that is nearly three times the price. But with the destruction of the Irish woods, smelting practically ceased—no serious efforts were made to revise the methods employed as in England. Coal was not substituted for wood.

The wealthy ironmasters in England, combining with the English government, which interfered with transit facilities, conspired to kill the industry. Not only was no assistance given to aid the development of Irish coal for smelting purposes, but a special tax was placed upon it following the union—and that though such a tax was expressly forbidden by the very terms of the union.

Thus, though coal and iron are found in conjunction in many districts, mainly in the great Cavan-Leitrim district of the Arigna field, Ireland is obliged today to import what pig iron it needs after shipping the ore to Great Britain to be smelted.

NUXATED IRON
MASTER STRENGTH BUILDER OF THE BLOOD

The Power Behind the Strong, Sturdy Men and Healthy, Beautiful Women of Today

"To make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic Iron—Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron, by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system. It often increases the strength of weak, delicate people in two weeks' time. It is estimated that over 3,000,000 people use Nuxated Iron annually as a tonic and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST YOURSELF
And Find Out Where Your Blood Stands

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended and prescribed by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the different inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results in every instance or they will refund purchase money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

CITY MARSHAL IN HOLYOKE RESIGNS

City Solicitor Also Quits Over Differences in Regard to Law Enforcement

Holyoke, Sept. 19.—As the result, it is claimed, of differences with Mayor John Ryan over the conduct of police business, City Marshal Stephen F. Murphy and City Solicitor Thomas J. Lequel have resigned.

The resignations have been accepted by the Mayor, who has appointed Attorney E. J. Stapleton city solicitor, to fill the vacancy and is expected to appoint a new city marshal today.

It is generally understood that the resignations were the result of the lax enforcement of the laws in regard to the illegal sale of liquor and existence of many gambling joints.

It is claimed the city marshal wanted a stricter enforcement of the law but Mayor Ryan vetoed the idea.

HIGH COST OF LEATHER CAUSES FACTORY LAY-OFF

Lawrence, Sept. 19.—The high cost of leather is the reason ascribed for the laying off of 100 of the 600 employes employed at the Walton shoe factory here. A complete tie-up of the plant is expected.

The company officials stated that the production of the factory would have to be greatly decreased in order to keep down the prices of shoes, which will have to be boosted to meet the present leather prices if the work continues.

ACCUSE LAWRENCE MAN OF ATTACKING POLICE

Lawrence, Sept. 19.—Broilous J. Brank, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on Harry Nimmo, chief of the Methuen police, and Officer James Hewitt of the local police, was tried in the Superior Criminal Court here.

The case is the outgrowth of a search of certain property at Maple Park, in Methuen, during the mill strike, for a quantity of dynamite which the police suspected had been stored there.

One witness for the defence stated that she saw an officer strike Brank with a club, with the words, "I'll knock you dead."

The officers on the stand said that one man, while being pushed into the shed, tried to use a gun on them. The case is now in the hands of the jury.

HAVANA HARD HIT BY GULF STORM; 7 DROWN

UXBRIDGE STATE GUARD COMPANY IS FILLING UP

Uxbridge, Sept. 19.—Captain Hugh D. McKenzie, Co. L, M. S. G., reports that about twenty-five men of the company which was disbanded in June had volunteered for service in connection with the police strike in Boston, and that he hoped soon to have the company up to full strength.

DUNNE DIFFERS WITH WILSON ON IRELAND

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Former Governor Dunne of Illinois, a leader in the Irish freedom movement, in a formal statement today, takes exception to President Wilson's interpretation of the League of Nations' covenant as regards the Irish situation.

Replying to President Wilson's statement that the United States, under the league covenant, does not obligate itself to assist any member of the league in putting down a rebellion of its subjects or conquered people's, Mr. Dunne's statement says, in part:

"It is unlikely Ireland, with an unarmed population of 4,300,000, can succeed in rebellion without external assistance.

"If any other country should come to the assistance of Ireland or Egypt, or India, as France did in the case of America in 1778, and as France attempted to aid Ireland in 1798, it would then become the duty of this country, under Article 10, to preserve the territorial and political integrity of Great Britain, over Ireland, Egypt or India."

Juniors at Medford Ask for Shorter School Hours

Petitions are being circulated among pupils of the junior high schools of Medford, asking the School Committee to grant shorter hours and one session a day.

At the present time these pupils are kept in school one hour longer each day than others. They request one session a day, from 8 to 1, as it is now in vogue in the high school.

The committee claims that the juniors are kept in school the extra hour for the reason that they have no home work to do.

ACCUSE BRITISH PREMIER OF DECEPTION

London, Sept. 19.—The London Times this morning accuses the British Administration of deception in announcing that the Supreme Council at Paris had approved British evacuation of Russia and decided to let the Russians work out their own salvation.

The Times says the Italian and American delegations denied this and the French delegation had not discussed the subject.

The Morning Post, Daily Chronicle, and the Manchester Guardian insist that the British authorities gave out an official statement of the Supreme Council's alleged approval of British evacuation of Russia.

The Premier refuses to discuss the matter.

POWERFUL PILE REMEDY DISCOVERED

Has Never Failed to End Most Obstinate Case of Piles in Few Days.

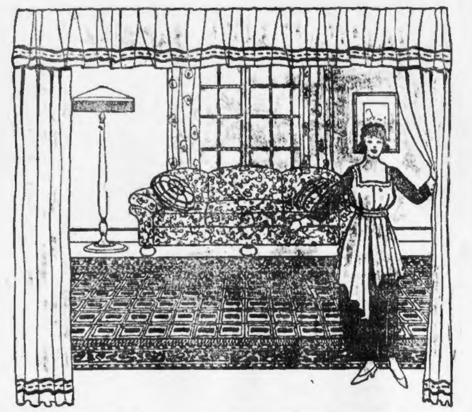

For years it has been proved that so-called external remedies applied to or inserted in the rectum cannot cure piles, and at the best can only give temporary relief. Surgical operations also do not remove this cause, but simply the formation.

This wonderful prescription, known as Miro Pile Remedy, is so efficient in the treatment of piles that even chronic cases of from 20 to 30 years standing with profuse bleeding have been completely relieved in from three to ten days. Think of it! Just a few doses of a carefully balanced prescription and the most persistent case of piles is absorbed, never to return.

The W. B. Hunt Co. of Cambridge and Roxbury Crossing dispense Miro or can get it for you on short notice. Surely it's worth the little trouble to obtain it to be rid of piles forever.

IMPORTANT—What is known as itching piles are not piles in the true sense of the word, although this condition may accompany a true case of piles. For this condition Miro Pile Ointment has been prepared, as in such cases it is not necessary to take the internal prescription.—Advertisement.

KAISER IN WAR, WEAK AND NERVOUS, VON TIRPITZ SAYS

REVEALS THE DISSENSION AMONG GERMAN LEADERS

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS
By ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

It is bitter to think that had the German Emperor been the dominant and forceful character which he was painted in entente countries, the whole course of the war might have been different.

By our enemies he was given the credit for driving the nation with an iron will dictating policies with irresistible force. He was quite different. I cannot but feel that this truth was sad for Germany.

As early as January 19, 1915, the Kaiser was fast losing his grip on the military and political situations. On the 19th of that month I had a conversation with him in the evening. He was very nervous, and one moment elated over the reports of local victories, the next depressed over the prospects for the future.

I brought the conversation round to the submarine situation once more. He had been talking to Trentler and Valentine, who had again biased him against the submarine campaign by saying that it would give Italy a pretext for war. Ballin had opposed it because it would upset his prospective and utterly foolish plans for a reciprocal agreement with England concerning naval activities. I was impressed with the idea that what the government was looking for was peace, no matter what terms were offered. It seemed to be the attitude that a rotten peace would be better than no peace. We seemed to be discouraged and already to consider our original aims as unattainable.

"CUTTING MATTER OF NERVES."

The Kaiser kept talking about a pet theory of his that victory was only a matter of nerves anyway. His idea was that by working upon the nerves of our enemies we could make them believe they were beaten, that they would believe the victory was ours. He said that the nation which did not allow its nerves to be shaken, or the nerves of its leaders unstrung, was always the winner.

And in the same breath he displayed his own acute nervousness. Sometimes I almost thought that his mind was shaken. He dwelt upon trivial incidents of the battlefield which only increased his lack of nervous stability. He should not have been told of such things.

After saying that we would win because the nerves of our enemies would not stand the strain, he began to talk about what would happen if he should break under the pressure. He worried about what we should do without him. He must suppress his own excitement, he said, and appear calm in order to help the others.

Already he was out of it from a military point of view, but what would happen were his nerves to break. I did not know. Such a contingency had not been taken into consideration in our plans.

(In a recently published statement, Hindenberg stated that from the first the German General Staff, and not the Kaiser, was responsible for Germany's military politics. Von Tirpitz seems to agree with Hindenburg on this one point at least.—Editor's note.)

I have mentioned before his elation over the fall of Antwerp. He spoke of it continually and, at least when he was present, Grand Headquarters seemed to be as much overjoyed as he. While we wasted time in what seemed almost in the nature of celebrations over every victory, our enemies were straining every muscle and every nerve to make those victories costly to us, and to take away their value if we won them.

CHURCHILL IS IN ANTWERP.

Churchill himself was in Antwerp until two days before the actual capitulation. He was tearing all over the place in a private car directing the defence and urging everyone to resist to the last. Only when he saw that the city was absolutely doomed did he leave, and even then he went into France to help bolster their lines there.

Incidentally I will mention that Admiral von Schroeder took me through Antwerp after the city had fallen to us. The endless wharves and warehouses showed nothing but goods produced by German firms. I realized that Antwerp had gorged herself full on Germany and wondered if we would keep the place.

To my mind the performances of the Emden were as great a matter for rejoicing as the fall of Antwerp, where the garrison was permitted to escape. But the Kaiser, usually so proud of the achievements of the navy, had been influenced by Ballin, who decried the Emden's successes because they made the English more bitter.

(The German light cruiser Emden destroyed 23 allied merchant vessels with cargoes worth $25,000,000 and sunk the Russian cruiser Jemtchug and a French destroyer in a daring raid on the harbor of Penang. The Australian cruiser Sydney drove her ashore at Cocos Island in the Indian Ocean, November 9, 1914. A part of her crew under Lieutenant Muecke who had been sent ashore to destroy the Cocos Island wireless station, seized the schooner Ayesha, lying off the island, and escaped. They made a record for raiding on their own account and months afterward turned up at Turkish headquarters in Damascus.—Editor's note.)

DELIGHTED WITH EMDEN.

To return to the attitude of mind in Germany. Ballin's remarks about the Emden were typical of it. He may have been right when he said that it would make the British more furious, but just the same I was delighted with the record her crew made. I felt that had been the spirit of our commanders we would not have been content with the victories we gained and WE WOULD NOT HAVE FALLEN INTO THE HABIT OF THINKING ALWAYS ABOUT PEACE. We were too ready to relinquish our aims. As early as November of the first year of the war, even the members of our general staff were beginning to express a belief that we would not be able to break through in the north and take Calais.

A great deal of the energy they were spending in futile air raids could have been used to better advantage in defeating our enemies in the field. There was too much talk of how the English were terrified by the Zeppelins and too little of pushing on to Calais.

I argued always for war to the knife, but I was not in favor of frightfulness for its own sake. It did not have the effect on our enemies which the general staff believed it did. It was wrong to bomb hate ridden with machines which threw only single bombs. When they struck and killed nothing but old women they were odious and the people got used to them so that they did not have any effect.

When we exhibited such weak purpose in the early months of the war it is no wonder that after four years of contending not against our enemies alone, but against vacillating policies at home, we submitted to a peace of slavery in the end?

SCORES PRINCE MAX.

As late as the Fall of 1918, when we were inspired by faith in our own strength and the will to do to the utmost, we could have wrested from the entente a decent peace. In October, 1918, I wrote to Prince Max of Baden that Germany still had strength to make a last desperate stand and show her teeth to the victory flushed enemy with profit to our cause.

(Von Tirpitz seems to have been ignorant of the fact that Prince Max was appointed Chancellor for the express purpose of arranging peace as quickly as possible to stop the disorganization of military and political machinery.—Editor's note.)

But Prince Max's government rested upon appallingly dishonest and artificial foundations. The submarine campaign were abandoned absolutely and our capitulation began. It was agreed that what these misguided leaders believed would be a peace of justice must be accepted at once. Every honest thinking German who took exception to this view or expressed belief that the peace which the entente would give would not be one of justice was accused of treason and regarded as an outlaw.

Yet without the shadow of a doubt the army and navy could have held out until Spring when a real peace could have been negotiated. Those were indeed the darkest days of Germany's history when, although we were still fully capable of making an offer, sword in hand, of just peace to our equally war-weary enemies, we rejected the opportunity and went down into chaos.

WROTE TO CHANCELLOR.

As chairman of the Fatherland party at that time, I wrote to the chancellor:

"I can think of no worse peace than that which will be forced upon us if we capitulate at this time when we still have left considerable power of resistance. We should have fared better had we sought peace through England rather than through America and Wilson."

(The Fatherland party was originated by a small group of citizens of Koenigsberg to combat pessimism in the German people. It was at first non-political, but rapidly became partisan and fell under the control of the Junkers (Pan-Germans) and other reactionaries. It exploited the pre-Hipe and sins of Hindenburg. By imperial decree, the Kaiser lifted the ...

What's in back of the advertising

Too often advertising is 100% advertising, or nearly so. Which is to say that the effort is put into the advertisement rather than what is in back of it.

You would be interested if you could be on the inside of the Filene establishment, to see how much more effort is put into having good things to advertise, than is put into having good advertisements!

Filene advertising simply tries to mirror the facts. It aims at putting the major part of its efforts into giving better values, into showing the newer things sooner, into making this a better kind of store.

Our advertising corps meet the department head's question "How large an advertisement can I have?" with the Yankee trick of answering by another question, "What good news can you provide to advertise?"

And it is interesting to know that in addition to putting our efforts into better merchandise rather than better advertising, that this is a Filene policy:

"Advertise what the public wants, not what we want to get rid of."

FILENE BETTER VALUES.

(Filene's—mail orders filled—street floor)

A typical blue serge from the women's inexpensive dress shop, $15

Inexpensive, but it is so well made and the serge is so fine that one wouldn't be ashamed to wear it beside a frock that cost three times as much. The throat is finished with an unusual turned over flap. $15.

Filene's—mail orders filled—sixth floor.

Women's embroidered Georgette blouses $7.50

Sketched is an altogether charming blouse with a deep notched collar and embroidered revers. This is one of a score of new styles, in flesh and white, at $7.50. Unusually good choosing in $3 lingerie blouses.

Other good-looking suits, not hand-tailored, $29.50 and $35.

Other women's suits, $40 to $375.

Plenty like the coat sketched above—a big, warm polo mixture in a soft cocoa shade. The back is loose and flaring, the front is belted. The huge pockets are in keeping with the collar which buttons up snugly enough to eliminate the need of a scarf, although one could be worn well with it. Lined to the waistline. $35.

Stocks Irregular in New York; Trading Is Dull

STEELS ADVANCE AND LIST FOLLOWS

Big Market Shows Improvement in the Second Morning Hour

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but the market had a good tone, almost every active issue showing a gain. Steels lead the upturn, which came in the second hour. Trading was of small volume during the morning, first hour transactions not totalling much more than 200,000 shares.

At the opening the Boston market had a heavy tone, and the majority of issues were lower. At its best during the morning it was irregular. Trading was narrow and quiet. Fluctuations were small. Nothing of interest marked transaction during the forenoon. In the financial district the prospective steel strike was regarded as reason for caution as to either business or speculative commitments.

Among stocks to decline during the morning were: Copper Range, Mohawk, Old Dominion, Osceola, Punta Alegre, National Leather, Swift & Co. and East Boston Land.

Issues to advance included Woolen preferred, Ventura, Root and Van Dervoort, Walworth, Waldorf and American Telephone.

Stocks to sell ex-dividend were: American Telephone, Waldorf and Bigheart.

Coppers were the weakest class. Nothing was reported from the metal market to warrant any change in the valuation of these shares. They were weak in New York.

SELLING PRESSURE AT OPENING

Prices eased off at the opening of the market. Initial declines averaged small and were without significance in most instances except as a reflection of the widespread industrial disturbance scheduled to begin on Monday. Selling pressure extended all along the line but brought out comparatively little stock. It was a professional market and operators were bearish almost to a man. Neither the public nor so-called "big people" participated in the trading. It is understood that in high financial quarters the belief obtains that but for strikes the bull movement would be resumed on a greater scale than before the setback.

PROSPERITY EXPECTED.

Future prosperity is not questioned, but the expansion regarded as inevitable must await readjustments of relations between employers and labor, arrangements to supply European requirements on credit and the end of indecision as to future control of railroads. It may take a long time to come to all the agreements that must be reached before business can proceed in confidence. Without confidence there can be no comfort for any class.

The stock market was nervous this morning. That it was no worse than heavy may be attributed to the circumstance that stocks are now in strong hands. Liquidation last month practically eliminated small fry speculators. At the end of half an hour the tone had improved a little, but this applied more particularly to steels and equipment. American Tobacco opened higher, but had receded under profit-taking. American Locomotive began higher and wavered for a while. Oils were weak at the start, while several motors showed a little strength. The market was still weak at the end of an hour, although prices ruled above the opening level.

LIBERTY BONDS ARE THE BEST INVESTMENT

The Boston News Bureau says: "Advent of better times for Liberty Bonds and government obligations was heralded in this market Wednesday when, for the first time, over par was bid for United States certificates of indebtedness. Banks were willing to pay 100. 1-32 for any 4½ per cent. certificates maturing within the next few months.

"They had no recourse, with call money at 4 per cent. and commercial paper now selling at 5 per cent. for the best names.

"Is the public aware of what is happening in the money market and where money rates are headed? Corporations and financial institutions know a turn has been called in the money market and are 'running to cover.' They have been quietly buying government obligations during several days."

Wall Street Briefs

An international banker estimates that Europe now needs credits in this country aggregating $5,000,000,000.

For the fiscal year ended by June last losses charged of by all national banks on loans and discounts were $33,984,000. This is about 0.33 per cent. of their aggregate loans of $10,135,000,000.

For the year 1911 sales of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. totaled only $7,462,000 while in August, 1919, alone they approximated $10,000,000. This corporation intends to increase its productive capacity until it amounts to from 38,000 to 40,000 tires a day.

A. B. Leach & Co., Inc., and W. D. Sounders & Co. have bought an issue of $3,500,000 J. I. Case Plow Works Company 7 per cent. First Preferred stock. These houses will form a syndicate and offer the stock in the near future.

Government Flour Purchases

The United States Grain Corporation announces that its purchase of wheat flour for the week ending September 16 amounted to 866,290 barrels at prices ranging from $9.76 to $10.25.

HALLS TO STAY ON FARM IN ANDOVER

Former Minister and Bride Deny They Intend Going to Florida

Lawrence, Sept. 19.—Henry Hall, lay preacher, formerly of Wells, Me., who was acquitted of the charge of wife murder, and his new wife will live in North Andover in preference to Florida.

Hall and his wife, the latter formerly Miss Grace Gerow, who figured in his trial last Spring, are to remain for the present, and perhaps the Winter, at the Kittridge farm, No. 58 Acamedy road, North Andover, according to Mrs. Kittridge, in whose home the couple are now quartered.

While Hall was engaged at his duties on the Kittridge farm the rumor was sent abroad that he and his wife were on their way to Florida, where they would remain.

Hall is disgusted, he says, at the publicity given his recent marriage. He says his physical condition is poor and that were it not for this he would be tempted to thrash some of the persons who had dragged his name before the public again.

Mrs. Kittridge said that Mrs. Hall would like to do some of the housework at the farm. Hall is pleased with his employment as a farm hand.

FIRST AIRPLANE PAYS CAPE COD CANAL TOLL

Buzzards Bay, Sept. 19.—An airplane has been levied a toll charge of $11 for the privilege of passing through the Cape Cod Canal, it was learned here. It is the first occasion in history where a plane has had to pay toll on its activity.

The circumstances arose from the fact that a Curtiss Seagull, one of the flying boats from the Thomas Seaplane Base at Bristol, R. I., while doing taxi work from Massachusetts to Buzzards Bay, was so heavily laden with suit cases and gasoline supply that it was necessary to proceed on the surface of the water instead of flying.

Do You Mean Business?

Do you mean business in life, or are you just ambling along, taking things as they come? Just because you may be fortunate enough to enjoy a good income, live well, and show all the indications of prosperity, doesn't necessarily prove that you really mean business. Not at all!

The answer lies deeper than that. There are thousands of people who make a mighty big noise in their community and who look to be on easy street for the rest of their lives, but whose prosperity will fall to pieces like a house of cards if the wind of misfortune but breathe upon it.

No matter how famously these people seem to be getting along in the world, they don't really mean business. Their prosperity is all an empty show—it hasn't got the solid foundation absolutely essential to success.

What is that foundation? It's something priceless in value, yet within the reach of all of us. It's the habit of SAVING!

The man or woman who really means business in life saves. No matter what your income is, lay aside regularly part of it and deposit it in a savings account. It's hard to save, when the cost of living is so high? Yes, it is—but it can be done. The persons who amount to something in life are the ones who can overcome obstacles. Sooner or later, as sure as fate, your saving will repay you a hundred-fold for your pains. You'll be able to ride the storm when others go down and out—you can look forward in happy anticipation to a comfortable future or the realization of a life-long dream.

Open a savings account TODAY with your local national bank or trust company, whose name appears here. Your money is safe with them, they'll pay you good interest—usually starting monthly—and give you the use of valuable credit and checking facilities. And the officers, being your fellow townsmen, take a personal interest in you and your success.

...Your Satisfaction." All ... all the time, are devoted ... possible value ... Style, Quality, Fit, Service and Satisfaction ... Clothes you buy here. Should a mistake occur, it is our pleasure ... our duty, to rectify it ... pleasantly and fully.

Our "Fall Opening" Announcement Is

New Clothes at Old Prices

When we started in the clothing business we made a firm and steadfast resolution to give our customers the full benefit of every advantage we could obtain in the cost of our merchandise and in the cost of doing business. Never have we had a better opportunity to demonstrate our adherence to this principle than right now. Never has our greater value-giving been so pronounced, so conspicuous, so unmistakable, as you will find it this season.

For be it known that there's a greater scarcity of good clothes now than at any previous time, and that prices are correspondingly high. But we bought our woolens and placed our contracts for this season much earlier than usual. The prevailing opinion was that prices would come down. They went up instead. But before they started on their latest advance, we had our fall needs pretty well covered.

So in spite of much higher clothing prices generally, our greater efforts, increased vigilance and still closer merchandising enable us to announce that, with but few exceptions, our prices are no higher than last season. Thus will the fame of the Eight Live Kennedy Stores as greater-value-givers be greatly enhanced, and our army of satisfied customers limited only by the quantity of merchandise obtainable.

We thank our friends for the remarkably increased business they have accorded us the past season—an increase so great as to materially reduce our percentage of "Overhead" and thus help to make possible the low level of our prices for this season.

HUGH FULLERTON

DAMON RUNYON

GANDIL EXCELS DAUBERT AT FIRST, SAYS FULLERTON

THIS is the second of a series of articles on the coming World Series between the White Sox and Reds, by Hugh S. Fullerton, baseball's greatest [illegible]. Mr. Fullerton will compare the rival players, size up the play of the two teams and name the probable winner of the great fall sporting classic.

HOW RIVAL FIRST BASEMEN COMPARE

	[illegible]	Defensive	Total
White Sox	.803	.337	1,140
Cincinnati	.784	.319	1,103

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

Chicago's White Sox are off in the lead of the dope. With thirty-seven points the better of the argument over the comparative values of first basemen for this series the Chicago outfit shows a superiority which hardly was suspected.

Not that the difference of ability of the players in one position is great enough to decide a series, but the average fan probably would look upon Jake Daubert as at least the equal of Chick Gandil as a guardian of the initial sack.

The dope, however, gives Gandil rather a [illegible] edge. The fact that neither of the two men measure up to the standard of first basemen of many former world's series has no bearing at all.

Gandil has shown an improvement this year which is surprising and he really has had two detracting elements in his work. The figures show that Daubert has a shade the better of the argument in that he has a trifle more speed on bases and in reaching batted balls [illegible] toward him.

Beyond doubt Gandil is the better mark for infielders to throw at, more certain on [illegible] the thrown balls and a more accurate [illegible] thrower, although [illegible] to get away [illegible]. Gandil has one other bad fault. He has a [illegible] which he has a habit of slipping sideways out of place and [illegible] even when it does not put him out of action.

GANDIL DANGEROUS HITTER.

He has had less trouble with it this season than he usually does but the danger still is there, and if he is out of action and [illegible] is forced into the game at first Chicago loses [illegible] points in defensive work.

Gandil goes [illegible] style of batting. He is a slashing, dangerous hitter, driving toward right field hard and over first base for long [illegible] down the line. We cannot give him credit in full for the hitting figures [illegible] tained this season. Undoubtedly, he has been little stronger [illegible] would [illegible] in considering [illegible] series, we must figure [illegible] against the [illegible] pitching he must face [illegible] his own [illegible].

Gandil is [illegible] hit Ring [illegible] just the type of pitcher to [illegible] will trouble Gandil with his curve if it happens to be [illegible] against that type of pitcher Gandil is a queer batter. He is likely to look easy for a three strike out or hit feebly, then smash one that will upset all the former plans.

GANDIL NEVER NERVOUS.

Comparison between the men is easy to make—far easier than it is between most rivals in a position. I have watched both these men for many years and have seen both in worlds series. Both are [illegible] and ought to have knowledge and experience, but neither is a brilliant or a fast man and Daubert, in spite of his showing this season, is not what he was.

In the World's Series against the Giants [illegible] as solid [illegible] showing signs of embarrassment [illegible] one of the best [illegible] of his career.

The New York critics declared Daubert lost his nerve in the series. He hit badly against both right and left-handed pitching and seemed to lack pep and ambition even in the game that his team won when the hitting was rather free.

Gandil is a hard working, very steady and rather plodding sort of a ball player. He is perhaps the best mark at which to throw in the American League and the value of a first baseman consists largely in his effect upon the outfielders. The day of the fast quick moving [illegible] first baseman is past, because it has been shown that too much of that kind of [illegible] on the part of the first baseman tends to unsteady the throwing infielders.

It was declared to me by a great infielder that he considered Gandil a greater first baseman for a team than Chase, because [illegible] moves kept the other infielders unsettled and made them hesitate in their throws.

Daubert is a compromise between the two types, but not as good a target for throwers as is Gandil, although his brilliant stops overcome some of that.

DAUBERT FAST AFTER BALL.

Gandil is slower in going forward to field slow rollers. Daubert has a slight edge on him in knocking down drives over first base and Gandil plays a slightly deeper field and then gets up in time. Gandil is the better man at touching runners sliding back to first base and Daubert throws across the infield to third a bit better, taking less time to get his throw started. Gandil, however, although slow in starting a throw, possesses deadly accuracy in throwing either to the plate or to third, while Daubert appears to make the throw down to second faster on a force out.

In the attacking end Gandil has hit better this season and is a right-handed hitter of the slashing type, while Daubert hits all around the field and is much [illegible] to make a long drive. Jake does not figure to hit either Cicotte or Williams, but oddly enough figures to hit the left-hander better than he will the right-hander. Williams is not the kind of left-hander that troubles Daubert.

We must figure [illegible] the advantage in the series because Daubert will be up against the kind of pitching hardest for him to hit. [illegible] Gandil [illegible] Cubs playing the White Sox [illegible].

In trying to stop [illegible] two [illegible] the [illegible] the right handed batters [illegible] science, first [illegible] Chicago Cubs [illegible] Hooper and others of the Red Sox played [illegible] right handed batters and the result was that Whiteman, a mediocre minor leaguer, hammered out the victories for Boston.

Such conditions, of course, affect the values of players in a series such as is pending. The advantage of the White Sox in the first base comparison is comparatively slight and depends largely upon steadiness rather than [illegible].

Copyright, 1919, the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

It was a big surprise in the big [illegible] going on, when George [illegible] took Mike Brady into camp [illegible] of 6 and 5. A close contest was [illegible] for in this match, but Mike [illegible] the lead on the [illegible] morning and kept it [illegible] affair. At the end of the [illegible] and McLean was four [illegible] the second round. Brady [illegible] comeback on the first five [illegible] cut the margin down [illegible]. He held the advantage [illegible] with a three-foot putt [illegible] but he missed [illegible]. Then Mike [illegible] the [illegible] his town. After [illegible] he won the [illegible] the next two [illegible] ending the match on [illegible] green.

[illegible] hard uphill fight with [illegible] Hosteath who had him [illegible] at the end of the morning round. [illegible] went to work in the afternoon and landed the match, 3 and 2. [illegible] proves that Long Jim can come from behind and win.

New England players are now all out of the playing as George Gordon fell by the wayside along with our own "Mike."

New Trophy for Press Golfers.

Jim O'Connell announces that the week beginning Monday, September 29, will be annual Boston Press Club golf tournament at Wollaston. A new trophy will be played for, the details [illegible] be announced later. Paul Tewksbury was the winner of the last trophy, the General Taylor [illegible] winning the event three times. Waino Ketonen, the world's middleweight wrestling champion, successfully defended his title in his bout with Tony Ajax, the coast middleweight champion, at [illegible] Opera House. Both [illegible] displayed some fine [illegible], but the all round cleverness of Ketonen was evident after the grapplers had been on the mat less than ten minutes. Ketonen then gradually worked around his man, and succeeded in getting his first fall in fifty-nine minutes, and then followed it up by getting the second in [illegible] minutes.

Jim Barnes, Western open champion, Bob MacDonald of Chicago, Fred McLeod of Washington and George McLean of New York are to meet as named in the semi-finals.

Barnes did what was expected of him when he defeated Emmet French of York by 3 up and 2 to play, but MacDonald produced a surprise when he defeated his old side partner, Jock Hutchinson, by the same margin. The other two matches were won by comfortable margins, McLeod eliminating Douglas Edgar of Atlanta, 8 and 6, and McLean disposing of James West of Rockaway by 9 and 7.

RED SOX IN FAREWELL SERIES

Coming Champion White Sox at Fenway Park Today and Tomorrow

By NICK FLATLEY.

Kid Gleason and his crop of American League champions have arrived in Boston today to properly close the season at the Fenway. From time immemorial it would seem, the A. L. seasons have closed with the champions of the circuit playing at the local orchard, so the arrival of Kid and Co. is according to the dope.

The stay of the athletes who have snatched the honors away from the Sox will be short, just today and tomorrow—then the ball yard will be locked up until Spring when the fans hope for better luck and everything like that. Having the champions land just when they've won give the Boston baseball host — best judges of title owners there are—a last minute look at the stars who will play the Cincinnati Reds a little later on.

Kid Gleason is putting on the finishing touches now, as you might say. He has been putting them on all year as a matter of fact, and he showed his shrewdness by steering his team along through one of the tightest races in the history of the league. The Yankees, Indians and Tigers all cracked under the strain, but not the Alabaster Hose.

KEPT RIGHT ALONG.

They maintained the even tenor of their way, although everybody was waiting for the them to flop because of weakness in the pitching box. They didn't show a single weakness in any spot at any time, and certainly earned the honors and the profits that are theirs.

Ancient Edward Cicotte has been the most scintillant performer of the outfit, coming through at the head of the league pitchers about the time that he should according to the averages be chasing back toward the bushes. But time does not stale Edward's stuff, and he will be the principal box reliance of Gleason in the big jamboree.

Edward will undoubtedly perform in one of the games here—there are three of them. The double header tomorrow promises at this time to break the season's attendance record. There has been an extraordinary advance sale, and everybody and his brother is talking of going.

TRIBUTE TO BABE.

After the farewell [illegible]ame, which the Tigers won, 8 to 2, [illegible]ine a hundred yards long lined up at the box offices at the Fenway getting reserved seats for the Ruth Day happenings. The composite attractions of seeing new champions and honoring George Edward Ruth is sure some magnet, and the club is lucky once more because of the way the schedule was arranged.

The finale with the Tigers was a very one-sided affair, the enemy jumping Sam Jones early and always keeping out in front by dint of real Detroit hitting. Sam was relieved by McGraw, but he didn't fare well either. Ehmke started in for the Tigers, but was derricked after he had walked the first two Sox and had hurled a pair of bad ones to Lamar.

Then Doc Ayres appeared and sailed smilingly through, getting great support from his fielders and his hitters. If Doc had joined Detroit sooner, Hughey Jennings might now be putting on the finishing touches for that joust with the Reds. But like all the rest, Hughey's farewell remark was, "Just wait until next year."

Caps Plus and Caps Minus

It is just a little problem in higher mathematics—top of your head. Getting down where everyone can hear, it means that Delano caps have the swagger that adds much to one's appearance. Deftly designed with one piece and eight quarter tops, long peak, and fashioned of the best looking cloths in warm tones of green, gray and brown, they're the best looking lids in town. Ticketed as low as two and as high as five dollars.

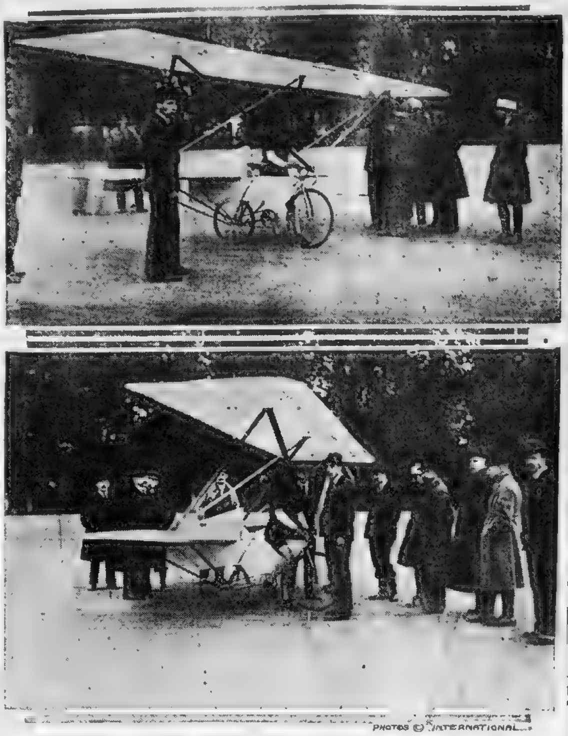

The Delano Lad reminds those youths, sentimental and otherwise, who go walking o' nights, that the Delano glove array in suedes and capeskin, backs stitched or plain, are most individual looking. $1.50 to $3.50.

Killed by Mother Bear When He Attempts to Assist Cub

Yellowstone National Park, Wyo., Sept. 19.—Tourists sojourning at hotels at this famous resort, where boiling water shoots from the earth in one spot and a few yards distance aqua pura of almost icy coldness may be had to slake the thirst, often are entertained by wild animals, particularly black bears, gathering at the hotel dumping grounds to satisfy their hunger from the food to be found among the garbage.

Recently a stranger, whose name has not yet been ascertained for the reason that he has been tenting nearby, attempted to extricate a black cub from a condition which might have eventually proved his destruction.

A tin can containing a quantity of food attracted young bruin's attention. In his endeavor to secure the morsels the cub forced his head into the tight-fitting receptacle and do his best could not get it out again.

Perceiving his dilemma, the kind-hearted stranger attempted to assist the muzzled beast. His act was observed by the mother bear, who pounced upon her progeny's benefactor and before assistance could be rendered killed him.

Later she was herself killed and the cub unable to get away, was made prisoner.

MAUMEE RIVER IS FULL OF GOLDFISH, SAYS DEALER

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 19.—Lovers of goldfish in Toledo who desire to add to their aquarium collection need not pay high prices for pedigreed members of this piscatorial family. All that is necessary is a hook and line. The Maumee River here is full of them, according to C. M. Lamb, wholesale fish dealer. He says the fish escaped from a pond at an asylum and made their way through ditches and drains to the river. He reports that many are caught by fishing boats.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Everything is advancing in price, and with the high cost of living affecting everybody it is natural to suppose that every class of society will squirm until relief comes.

PACER WINS TWO HEATS, THEN IS DISQUALIFIED

Columbus, O., Sept. 19.—There were four well-contested events on t[illegible] day's Grand Circuit program. Nearly all of the interest centred on the 2.09 pace, in which an unusual occurrence sent Esther R., driven by Murphy and winner of the first two heats, to the barn before the third heat started on account of ineligibility.

The owner of Aquilla Dillon after the second heat claimed that Esther R's record of 2.06¼ had been made August 16 at Philadelphia and was one day too soon to retain her eligibility. His complaint was verified and Murphy's mare sent to the barn. Aquilla Dillon was declared winner of the first two heats. She then won the third heat and race.

The free-for-all pace was disappointing. Miss Harris M., the favorite, was beaten by Directum J. Baron Cegantle won the 2.15 trot and Dr. Nick won the 2:18 trot.

Glad to See Him

Jim, the night elevator man, was as glad to see Allaire as had been Henry. Allaire thanked him, tipped him, refused to talk to the newspaper men, and was taken to his apartment. He flung himself into a chair and rested there a moment staring desperately blankly at the wall. Then he pulled himself together and began undressing.

The wall telephone bell rang. It was Blake, downstairs, asking permission to come up. Allaire granted it, and the ex-commissioner of police entered the little apartment a moment later. One glance at Allaire's tired, discouraged face told him that the lawyer had learned nothing by his pursuit of his far-fetched theory.

"Find anything?" Blake asked perfunctorily.

Allaire briefly related [illegible] of his search in the "morgue" of the Star.

"And you?" he inquired.

Blake sat down.

"Allaire," he said gravely, "I'm almost afraid that this society is too many for us."

The lawyer smiled faintly.

CHAPTER LVI.

DAVID SMITH DELAINE stood on the steps of his lodging-house scanning the telegram that had just been handed to him. The boy bringing it had arrived just as David emerged from the front door.

DeLaine had intended to go around to the garage more from force of habit than because he expected to receive any message from his employer at that place. He had asked Samuel Leighton to communicate with him at the Lexington avenue address. The special delivery letter sent last night must have been received several hours ago, David reflected.

When he took the telegram from the messenger and signed the blank accompanying it he supposed it was from his employer. The signature "D. L." almost took his breath away.

The ten words Desiree had sent left him still more breathless.

At first his heart beat madly with joy; then cold reason and common sense warned him that he was misinterpreting the message.

When he read the brief sentence for the third time he noted the address of the office from which it had been dispatched.

"That proves that she did not send this," he muttered. "It is a trick on the part of a would-be mischief-maker — Jefferson, perhaps."

Yet, he reminded himself, Jefferson would not know of his—David's—plan to leave the employ of Samuel Leighton. Leighton himself could not have had time to impart the information to anybody but his daughter. Surely Desiree would not care enough to interfere in allowing events to take their course.

Unless there was something which he did not understand—some complication that was absolutely inexplicable to him.

There was only one way to ascertain who sent this message. That was to go to the office and inquire. Until he had done this speculation as to its significance was worse than idle.

It was one thing to reach this wise decision, but quite another to carry it out. David proved this on his way down to Twenty-third street by studying the slip of yellow paper at least a half dozen times and wondering what it meant.

"I know that a man sent the thing," he assured himself as he reached his destination.

With a business-like air he handed the telegram to the clerk at the counter.

"Can you give me the address of the sender of this?" he queried brusquely.

"The address the sender gave was Dorothy Lang, 22 East Eighty-sixth street," the clerk said without looking up. "You wish to send a reply?"

"Oh, no—that is—not just now," David stammered. "Was it—I mean it was an elderly lady, wasn't it?"

He flattered himself that his bearing was nonchalant as he put the question. The clerk smiled knowingly.

"No—she was a young lady with dark eyes and hair—very pretty, too. I happened to be the one she handed the telegram to when she had written it. From her looks I wouldn't give her a day over twenty."

"Indeed!" David commented with a lifting of his eyebrows. "Then I was mistaken."

His thoughts were in such a whirl that he must collect them unless he would do something ridiculous.

Almost without his own volition, he walked out to Madison Square and dropping down upon a bench, mused long upon this wonderful happening.

Now he was convinced that Desiree Leighton had sent the telegram to him. He knew no Dorothy Lang. The description of the sender as "a young lady with dark eyes and hair, very pretty," made the matter certain.

The youth in the telegraph office had been rather impertinent, David supposed, but he was so grateful to him for setting his own doubts at rest as to the identity of the mysterious "D. L." that he found it quite easy to forgive a speech that he would at another time have termed inexcusably "fresh."

For one truth was pressing in upon his consciousness.

It was that Desiree Leighton had wanted him to stay in her father's employ a little longer.

Why had she asked him to do this?

In the first flush of excitement he had grasped, with the eagerness of a lover, the hope that she had done this thing because she liked him. Then as his mind became saner he appreciated that a girl like Desiree would never ask a man to stay anywhere on her account. He saw how ridiculous and fatuous had been his wild conclusion and sneered at his ready optimism.

Yet it must be something of great importance that would tempt the daughter of his employer to practice deception in order to delay her father's chauffeur's departure. There was a mystery here and he was deeply perplexed by it.

He sat a full hour, smoking and trying to unravel the tangle to his own satisfaction. When at last he arose and turned his steps towards the subway it was with a definite determination.

If Samuel Leighton requested him to remain in his service a little longer he would do so. Since Desiree had suggested this, he would follow her suggestion.

What of his trip to Baltimore?

He must make that, too. But not until he had given his employer's daughter an opportunity to explain by words or action her enigmatical message.

To Be Continued.

The Connoisseurs

"Did you go to the symphony concert?" "Yes." "Enjoy it?" "No." "Why, I heard it was very good." "It may have been for all I know." "What was the matter?" "Two women who sat behind me kept up a constant line of chatter during the whole affair." "What did they talk about—the ending of the war?" "No; they were telling each other how much they loved music."

A Daily Recipe

Fresh Mushroom Epicure

Take eight small mushrooms, very hard, and peel. Put them in a saucepan with a small piece of fresh butter and a quarter of a glass of white wine. Cook them very quick with the cover on. When ready take the mushrooms out of the pan and make the sauce as follows: Reduce the white wine and add two spoonfuls of cream sauce, not too thick; put some chopped faragon and chives, season with salt and pepper. Drop the mushrooms in the sauce and finish the whole with a good piece of butter.

Baby's Name

A family discussion was being held for the purpose of choosing a name for the new baby. "Yours Esmeralda is too sweet," said one of the infant's aunts. "Agnes is better and more uncommon," said another. "How would Alvira do?" asked a third. "Scarcely," said the fond father. "You seem to be getting away from the idea that this is a baby and not a new brand of cigars."

A Conversational Gift.

"What are 'diplomatic circles'?" asked a young girl looking up from a newspaper. "There are different kinds," replied her father. "One prominent style of diplomatic circle is the conversation which keeps getting round to where it began."

Dandruff Soon Ruins the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

UNCLE SAM HIT IN ROLE OF EDUCATOR

Thirty "Americans All," Illiterate Four Months Ago, Here to Demonstrate Army System

What Uncle Sam has been doing to train illiterates for military service and citizenship will be shown in Boston on Sunday, when thirty men from the "American All" detachment will arrive here in command of Lieutenant-Colonel Bernard Lentz of the General Staff. The group comes here to encourage recruiting for the regular army among men of this class.

Four months ago not a single one of these soldiers was able to read, write or speak the English language, with the exception of one American, who could, of course, speak English, but otherwise was as illiterate as his comrades. Today military experts declare that these men from Camp Upton, who are touring the country to let their countrymen see what the army "melting pot" has done for them, are well-drilled soldiers, and their progress in the past few months has been nothing short of astonishing.

MAKE GOOD SOLDIERS.

Before the war no person except an Indian could be enlisted in our regular army unless the applicant could speak, read and write the English language. During the emergency a great number of illiterates, both foreign born and American, came into the service, and it was quickly discovered that men of this type under intensive instruction could be made rapidly into good soldiers. When the armistice was signed schools for the drill and instruction of such men were functioning in every camp and the War Department decided to continue enlistments for illiterates as a permanent policy.

AID TO CITIZENSHIP.

In addition to a military training and an education in English and citizenship, these men are able to obtain their final citizenship papers on their discharge, a clear gain of two years, as by any other method an alien is required to wait five years before taking out his complete papers of citizenship.

CLAIMS IRELAND WAS DECEIVED BY WILSON

De Valera Says People Trusted in Promises Which President Never Meant to Keep

New York, Sept. 19.—Ireland's confidence in the promise of freedom extended by President Wilson in the announcement of his plan for a League of Nations, and the disappointment that was felt when it was seen that the President did not intend to support Ireland's claims, were the themes of Eamon de Valera's address at a mass meeting in the 13th Regiment Armory, Brooklyn.

"It is impossible to make you realize how the Irish people felt as they studied the declarations of President Wilson," said de Valera. "Every speech, every message of his spoke as if Ireland was the chief exemplar he had in mind, though he did not explicitly mention it by name. The Irish people trusted the declarations of your President as they trusted no other.

"The Irish people knew Lloyd George and smiled at his sworn declaration that England did not want a yard of territory and was in the war from motives of purest chivalry, just as they smiled at the professed altruism which the cables brought us today. They knew that whoever did the fighting England would be sure to seize the spoils.

"Until America entered the war, the Irish people had no thought that it would bring freedom to any small people whatever. But when America entered the war it made a difference.

"Oh, what a triumph for the cynics it has been so far. Will the plain people, the sheep who are ever led to the slaughter, never awaken to the fact that their leaders are strong only by their strength and that if they organize the peace that they want can be attained for a certainty by themselves?"

Lloyd George Has a New Solution of Irish Problem

By Universal Service. Special Cable Dispatch.

London, Sept. 19.—The Irish question is said to have been discussed at an important session of the Cabinet. Prior to the session, Sir Edward Carson had a conference with Bonar Law.

Premier Lloyd George is credited with having evolved a scheme which he thinks will go far toward a solution of the Irish problem.

POLITICIANS' FLYING TOURS CALLED OFF

Usual Outbreak of Oratory Banned This 'Saturday Night Before'

For the first time in years the "Saturday Night Before" will pass down into history without the usual outbreak of oratory. The usual flying tours of the city by the various candidates are off. In their stead a quiet enforced by armed guardsmen prevails.

The politicians, big and little, must do their campaigning in some way other than that generally adopted as the primary voting day draws near. Messrs. Foss, Long, Deitrick and Monahan must forego the pleasure of telling the voters just why either of them should be the Democratic nominee for Governor.

Messrs. Juggins, Kiley, Lundy and Pelletier are deprived of the chance of setting forth their reasons for being the district attorney candidate on either of the two tickets. Symphony Hall will not resound with the praises of Mr. Pelletier, who was expected to hurl condemnation on the heads of his opponents.

In its stead intensive circulation, house to house appeals and advertising will reign. Today the surrounding towns in Suffolk County are being toured by all save Pelletier. Juggins will visit Revere, Winthrop and Chelsea before midnight. He today received the unanimous indorsement of the Italian-American Republican Club of Revere.

Juggins continues to attack the Republicanism of the other candidates, Lundy continues to attack most everything in general, while Kiley still demands explanations. Mr. Pelletier announces that in the Sunday papers he will make a statement on the campaign and set forth clearly some hitherto unprinted facts regarding the conduct of his office.

Stoneman Promises to Safeguard the People's Interests

"If I am elected Attorney-General, I promise that the public shall be safeguarded," said David Stoneman, candidate for the Republican nomination for that office, speaking in Lowell.

"The Attorney-General is the attorney of the people, and when the people are threatened by any grave danger it is his plain duty to instruct and advise them.

"There are no laws in America to prevent free speech; there is nothing to prevent the spread of pernicious doctrines, except the activity and integrity of our public officers."

Long Points Out Many Evils To Be Corrected From Governor's Chair

Joseph A. Conry, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Attorney General, and Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor, were speakers at a meeting of Democrats at the Quincy House.

Mr. Conry directed his remarks at Robert J. Bottomly, his Republican opponent, and said he would discuss the police situation with him on every platform, provided Mr. Bottomly became the "lone" candidate of his party.

Mr. Long said that the widespread corruption and contempt of the rights of the public by corporations is largely responsible for the prevailing unrest and discontent. The speaker declared that he would make the rich pay their share of taxes, that he favored a general law for street railways with a five-cent fare, and that the $5 poll tax be abolished. Also in addition to the $100 bonus he would give a private's pay for one year, $360, to every ex-service man. Mr. Long said that with the approval of the courts $541,000 was taken from the bankrupt Bay State Street Railway Company. He added that had he been Governor he would have directed the Attorney-General and his assistants to do this work without expense to the citizens who ride on the trolley cars.

He also referred to the fact that for five weeks no trolley cars have run in Berkshire County and that children are prevented from attending school, while trolley car men who ask only a reasonable pay are locked out.

RECRUITING WORK AT DEVENS IS PUSHED

Camp Devens, Sept. 19.—Regular Army men who re-enlist from this date on, will be paid the $60 bonus and travel pay of five cents a mile to their homes or place of last enlistment, according to Captain John C. Macdonald, Inf. U. S. A., the recruiting officer. Aviator R. C. Moffat continues to make flights in the interest of recruiting. Yesterday he made a flight trip to Manchester, N. H., where he was the guest of the Chamber of Commerce. Tomorrow Lt. Moffat will fly to Springfield. More than 110,000 men have enlisted since recruiting began. At Devens, approximately 1,400 men have enlisted. The Camp Devens Military Recruiting Show will attend the Greenfield and Brattleboro Fairs.

FORECAST AN ARREST IN NEWPORT FLAG INCIDENT

Newport, R. I., Sept. 19.—Police authorities investigating the tearing down of British and Italian flags in the Fifth Ward announced today that an arrest would be made as soon as sufficient evidence could be obtained. Malicious destruction of property will be the charge, according to Chief of Police John S. Tobin, as there is no other civil law to cover the case. The ward in which the action occurred is strongly pro-Irish, and belief was general today that the flags had been torn down to replace them with the emblem of the new Irish Republic to honor President De Valera.

MEDALS FOR DEDHAM SCHOOL GARDEN SHOW

Gold and silver medals for the best canning display, together with money prizes for the best general display of vegetables raised by the school children of Dedham, will be awarded at the Dedham School Garden exhibit to close today in Memorial Hall, Dedham. All school children of Dedham who have had gardens or have canned vegetables or fruit raised during the Summer, have contributed to the exhibit. A special prize was offered for the best home garden.

CHARGE VERMONTERS FALSIFY WOOL GOODS

Washington, Sept. 19.—Mislabelling of men's part-wool underwear as "Natural wool" is charged against the H. E. Bradford Company, Inc., of Bennington, Vt., in a complaint issued today by the Federal Trade Commission.

M. A. C. Alumni Meet Tonight

Alumni of Massachusetts Agricultural College will meet at the Bellevue Hotel tonight to plan for the October drive for funds for the proposed Memorial building. The business meeting will follow dinner, which will be served at 6. The new building will cost $150,000. It will be used to house various student activities.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN SEPTEMBER 19, 1919 BOSTON

Congressman Fuller's Tilt With Secretary of War on Troops Abroad

The American has had many occasions during the last few years to think well of Congressman Alvan T. Fuller. He has a directness and an independence which is too often lacking in men who hold public office.

The other day at Washington before the House Committee on Military Affairs he gave us another example of his independence and his bluntness in behalf of the truth in a very interesting passage at arms between himself and the Secretary of War. Secretary of War Baker was testifying before the committee concerning a resolution providing for the immediate withdrawal of American troops from foreign lands where they are being used and their blood being shed to protect high finance in London, Paris and Wall Street. We quote a Washington dispatch from the Universal Service. It is very illuminating. Our people ought to read it. After detailing the history of the Siberian situation, Secretary Baker said:

"The armistice is an armed truce. Peace has not been declared. While this armed truce exists war cannot be said to be over, and the Allies could not allow disorders to grow up on the fringe of the theatre of war that might threaten a new war. The Americans are not participating for or against Admiral Kolchak or the Bolsheviki. Their orders are to guard the railroad."

"Those reasons are all bunk," said Mr. Fuller, whose plain intimation was that the real reasons behind the administration's Siberian policy were being withheld. Insisting upon a direct statement as to why American soldiers still are on duty across the Pacific, the Massachusetts member continued:

"Why shouldn't we know the real reasons? It takes a long time to get an answer on a question. What are the real reasons?"

"I am sorry I have irritated the members of the committee by my long recital," Mr. Baker replied.

"I have listened to the romance with interest, but we want the facts," Mr. Fuller retorted. "Why cannot Congress know the reason? Let us have it. I don't seem to be able to get it."

"Unfortunately that is not my fault," the Secretary countered.

Representative Anthony, Republican, of Kansas, inquired at this point if the Siberian expedition was being maintained for commercial reasons, "or to protect investors in Russian bonds." Secretary Baker entered an emphatic denial that such was the case.

"Kolchak has agreed to guarantee the Russian debt," said Representative Mason.

"Wouldn't the withdrawal of the American troops give aid to the Bolsheviki?" Mr. Anthony asked further.

"I cannot answer that," Mr. Baker said. "If the withdrawal of the American forces would result in the crushing of Kolchak, it would."

"But why keep them there at all?" Mr. Mason pressed. "There is no danger from armed Germans now."

Mr. Baker then said:

"I am not certain there is no danger. Although they have not been fighting for many months (the German and Austrian war prisoners) they still seem to have arms and ammunition. As I stated earlier, there were between 200,000 and 300,000 German-Austrian war prisoners in Siberia, sent there by the original Russian government when Russia was an ally fighting Germany on the eastern front.

"There are many scattered bands of hostile men in Siberia, and this country is selling large quantities of supplies to the co-operative Russian societies, which supplies must go over the Siberian railroad. These people, some 20,000,000, are dependent on the supplies we send, and are loyal, faithful allies."

Mr. Mason contended that "American troops have no business in Siberia." He said it was a "usurpation of power by the Executive to send them there." He continued:

"The people of this country do not want American soldiers in Siberia, and I want a resolution from this committee to that effect. It is without precedent for the President to send these troops into Siberia. They were conscripted to fight Germany. Now, I understand, they are to send 5,000 soldiers to Europe to guard mines and elections in Silesia. I think they had better go to Boston, or perhaps to Chicago."

Representative Quinn, Democrat, of Mississippi, said he was opposed to keeping American troops in Siberia. He added:

"I want them out of there."

Taking issue with Mr. Mason's position, Secretary Baker declared:

"There is no power in Congress to regulate where the army or navy shall live. Such regulation would paralyze the Commander-in-Chief in the distribution of the army. You might as well order that all soldiers be kept in Washington."

Mr. Baker admitted that the United States is lending sympathetic assistance to Kolchak. How long American troops will remain "is a question of very large policy."

Of course, the sentiments expressed by Secretary Baker are those which he feels will be the most apt to justify the wicked policy of the President—a policy which is immoral and unconstitutional, of waging war against the Russian people and spilling American blood in the course of it, all to advance the interest of a lot of European and American speculators and to quiet the panicky nerves of the privileged class in Europe, who see their privileges threatened by any success of the experiment which the Russian workmen and peasants might make in their fatherland.

Of course, these are not Mr. Baker's personal sentiments, unless he has metamorphosed since he became a bureaucrat and fell under the influence of the President. Nothing in his record, however, indicates so easy a change of heart. He has been one of the most convinced radicals the country has produced and three-quarters of the hostility which has been evinced against him throughout the country has grown out of the fact that he was a radical and conducted himself honorably like a radical in office. We refuse to believe, even against his own statement, that these are his personal sentiments or that he speaks more deeply than from his lips when he pretends to justify the waging of war against the right of self-determination in Russia and the starving of Russian women and children and the leaving of the sick in the Russian cities to die of cholera and all kds of contagious diseases, because medicines bought in neutral coutries are seized by our American and British warships in order to force by this barbarity the Russian people to go back to their Car and all his barbarous trappings.

Nothing in the German conduct of the war begins to equal in loathsome cruelty the conduct of Great Britain, France and the United States toward the 150 million people in Russia.

If the moral sentiment of the world improves with time, history will execrate the very names of the men who are connected with this dastardly performance. It is the greatest outrage against mankind that has been perpetrated since the dark ages.

Letters to the Editor

Meat Packers

Editor Boston American:

We have read with interest a communication in the "Letters to the Editor" column of the American on August 16, the caption over which is "Packers to Blame."

The American correspondent, Mr. W. J. Dolan, deplores the fact that New England no longer raises steers, sheep and hogs for the market. He writes: "There are thousands and thousands of acres of good pasture lands on the hills and mountains of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont growing up in birches and scrub oaks—because of the beef trust."

We believe the decline of stock raising and of all agriculture in New England has not been due to unfair methods, as Mr. Dolan suggests, but to natural causes.

Under modern conditions it is difficult if not impossible to raise stock successfully on a farm of small size. The reason for this is simple. Labor is the most valuable item in the cost of producing crops and animals. On a small farm the cost of labor per animal or per acre is prohibitive. On a large farm the labor cost can be brought down to a small amount for each unit.

If modern farm machinery and methods enable a man in some parts of the United States to operate productively a general farm of several thousand acres, and a man in New England with the same amount of intelligence and labor—sometimes more, perhaps—is only operating a fifty acre farm, the loss in the second case may easily be understood. Competition between the two is impossible.

Does this not answer the main question raised by Mr. Dolan? A man in New England might, for his year's labor, raise a handful of steers or a handful of hogs. In cattle-growing districts a man for the same labor raises many times that number. And in this country it is labor that counts.

Mr. Dolan himself has mentioned the sanitary difficulty of establishing local slaughtering plants, and this, we believe, has been a cogent reason for the disappearance of butchering in the States named.

We should like to emphasize the point that only the better service of the large packer enables him to do business. At any time when local meat can be sold more cheaply than the packer meat, it is thrown into the market. In no instance is there any pressure from a packer to prevent such purchases by meat market men. Competition is too keen in this industry to allow any such high-handed methods.

Harvard Teachers' Salaries

There are salaries paid in State universities higher than in Harvard; and unless the scale of salaries in the faculty of arts and sciences advances considerably and rapidly, the graduate school and the college is going to suffer, going to suffer in two ways. First, because it cannot attract the best men to come here. They would like to, but cannot afford to come; they have to think of their families first. Our young men will be turning away elsewhere, and we can't get them back. And in the second place, the professor who stays is obliged to give an increasing amount of his time and energy to things other than teaching in order to keep the pot boiling.—Dean C. H. Haskins, Professor of History and Dean of the Graduate School in Arts and Sciences, Harvard University.

A YEAR or so ago
THERE WAS a colored man.
AND WHATEVER he worked at,
I DON'T know.
BUT HIS wife did laundry.
AND AFTER his work.
THIS COLORED man.
WOULD DELIVER the laundry.
AND I knew him.
BECAUSE ONCE a week
HE'D COME to our flat.
AND LOTS of times.
I'D ANSWER the door bell.
AND TAKE the laundry
AND HE was very polite.
AND WOULD take his hat off.
AND STAND in the doorway.
AND BOW.
AND I'D pay him.
AND HE'D bow some more.
AND BACK away.
AND THANK me.
AND KEEP on backing
TILL I closed the door.
AND TWO or three times.
I MET him on the street.
AND HE'D take his hat off.
AND I wanted to tell him.
HE DIDN'T have to do it.
BUT HE seemed to enjoy it.
AND IT didn't matter.
AND ONE time.
WE HAD to complain
ABOUT AN iron mark
ON A silk shirt.
AND HE almost cried.
AND WE were sorry.
AND FORGAVE him.
AND FORGOT about it.
AND THEN one day.
WE MOVED.
AND FOR five months.
WE DIDN'T see him.
AND LAST Saturday.
I WAS in my car
AND MY wife was with me.
AND SHE wanted to stop.
AT THE side street entrance.
OF A department store.
AND I did it.
AND A colored gentleman.
WHO WAS all dressed up.
LIKE A rear admiral.
OPENED THE door.
OF THE automobile.
AND MY wife got out.
AND BY that time.
THERE WAS a car behind us.
AND A car ahead of us.
AND THE colored gentleman.
WAVED HIS hand.
FOR ME to move on.
AND I had an awful time.
TRYING TO do it.
IN ABOUT four feet.
AND THERE were other cars.
THAT WANTED to get in.
AND I was nervous.
AND THE colored gentleman.
WAS GROWING impatient.
AND WE had words.
AND HIS voice was familiar.
AND I looked back at him.
JUST AS I left.
AND HE was our laundry man.

I THANK you.

INDUSTRIAL BOARD AND ITS DEEP PROBLEMS

By Ralph M. Easley

Chairman Executive Council, the National Civic Federation

THE industrial unrest, resulting in strikes and lockouts, and threats of many more lockouts, has become so acute in the last few months that President Wilson has wisely called a national conference to consider plans and methods for dealing with it.

In doing this, the President recognizes what Premiers Lloyd George of England and Borden of Canada have recognized in their respective countries, and that is, that the situation is so grave and so far-reaching in its various ramifications that only the highest authorities in the national government can properly, or at all effectively, deal with it. Lloyd George, facing a threatened paralysis of all industry in England, last March called a conference, composed of 200 representative employers and 200 representative wage-earners, while Premier Borden called a similar conference, which is meeting in Ottawa this very week.

Irrespective of the net results in terms of solution of practically unsolvable problems, the moral and educational effect of bringing together the leaders of both sides of the industrial fighting forces in Great Britain at that crucial moment was tremendous. It fact, it may not be too much to assert that it saved the nation from a calamity which threatened its industrial life.

Not So Serious

While the situation in this country when President Wilson decided to call his conference was not so serious as that which faced Lloyd George last Spring, it was serious enough to justify, if not to demand such a move on the part of the President. As in Great Britain, the mere announcement of the calling of such a conference had a reassuring effect on industry, and if nothing more concrete were to come out of it than the coming together at the White House of representatives of all sides of our great productive industries to consider the vital problems facing our nation, the effort would be more than justified. But very much more will come out of it.

Those familiar with the work of the National Civic Federation, which for fifteen years preceding the war had, in a smaller way, been bringing together these same forces of capital and labor with a view to composing their differences, saw results so gratifying as to justify the above prediction of what will happen at the White House. No problem relating to industrial conflicts is likely to arise at the President's conference that has not already arisen in the conferences of the National Civic Federation, excepting, of course, the special cause for the present unrest, the phenomenally high cost of living.

Helpful Results

While many employers on the President's commission will favor profit sharing or stock participating schemes of some kind, they will shy at any idea of giving the workers a voice in the management of the business, and with the wage earners also opposing it, as well as the practical people representing the public, it is pretty certain that participation in the management and business operation of industry will not make much headway in that conference.

Some of my hearers may say: "What is the use of calling a conference if you cannot stop these strikes and lock-outs, because it is the prevalence of them that has caused the calling together of that august body?" Again do I come back to the twenty years' experience of the National Civic Federation. At one time we believed in compulsory arbitration, especially in dealings with public utilities, because we argued, as everybody argues now, that the public interest is paramount and should be protected at all hazards. But no one has as yet invented a plan that will secure that protection.

But, fortunately, we are not confined to compulsory methods of arbitration and here, I think, is one of the places where the President's conference can accomplish practical and helpful results, justifying the expectations of its most sanguine friends. Experience with voluntary mediation and arbitration methods shows that very much can be done towards preventing industrial disputes.

Our Hothouse Earth
A New Jacques Coeur
$6 for $1
Using Vanderbilt Cash

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright 1919)

In cold February you have seen under the glass frame of a hot bed, little green things coming up through the warm soil, freezing air just above them.

Rohifs, flying man with the highest record, reminds us that we live, protected by the atmosphere of our earth, as the little tomato plant lives under the hot bed glass.

Rohifs went up more than 24,000 feet. He found the temperature nearly fifty degrees below zero. Yet he was only about six miles above the earth, 8,000 miles in diameter. If he had gone up a few miles more, outside the thin atmosphere which is the glass of our hot-house, earth, he would have found absolute zero, the cold ether through which suns and planets travel.

Rohifs wore mittens made by himself of felt half an inch thick. What that felt did for his hands our atmosphere does for this planet.

We live in a rapidly revolving, marvelously balanced hot-house arrangement. The atmosphere protects us from inconceivable cold outside. The earth's crust is a shield between us and liquid fire inside the earth.

If you lived in France and had nine children, Mr. Cognacq would give you 25,000 francs.

This gentleman is the greatest philanthropist France has known since Jacques Coeur built and endowed universities five hundred years before John D. Rockefeller was born. By the way, he was ultimately disgraced, imprisoned and stripped of his property because he became too powerful and got too much.

Mr Cognacq, French Rockefeller of today, had already given forty million francs for war relief work, a large sum in France, where fortunes are small. He now gives fifty-seven million francs to the Academy of Medicine. The income will give twenty-five thousand francs, as long as the money lasts, to every French father and mother with nine children. France needs big families and it is to be hoped that Mr. Cognacq's fifty-seven million francs will stimulate the birth rate.

It takes more than $6 worth of German money to buy one American dollar. The mark that used to be worth twenty-four cents is worth less than four cents

This looks like enforced bankruptcy and repudiation in Germany. No doubt the Germans will fight against it, trying to keep bankruptcy out of the national record to the last minute. But a country that must buy everything abroad, and that is not allowed by the Allies to take into account the depreciation of its money in taxing importations, will have hard work to continue and pay war indemnities.

Russia repudiated her debt on the ground that she was not responsible to them; that those to lend money to a despoic Czar. Germany may have to repudiate for the reason that causes the drowning man to sink when he can no longer swim.

Even France, one of the "winners" in the war, is having a hard time. Her money is only worth fifty cents on the dollar, and that financial rock of other days, the British pound sterling, is sickly and in trouble. War does not pay anybody, victors or defeated.

The first Mr. Vanderbilt, known to history when he rowed his little boat from Staten Island to Manhattan, propelling passengers with his own muscles, little thought how many different things his money would do.

One young lady, descended from the old boatman, rebuilt, redecorated, painted and put plumbing in Blenheim Palace, given by grateful England to the Duke of Marlborough.

Another young Vanderbilt lady now returns from Europe, leaving her husband, presumably supplied with money, behind. The husband is mentioned in Associated Press dispatches with others that have been busy hanging and whipping Jews in Hungary. If old Vanderbilt could come back he would tell the Hungarian Vanderbilt son-in-law that such things do not pay, and represent a poor way to spend Vanderbilt money.
